An Advertising Record Will Strikes Ever End? Europe Awakening Only One Party Left

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EVERY BUSINESS MAN knows that wise advertising is essential to recovery and growth.

HOW and WHERE to advertise is the business man's problem, once he has produced what the people want.

Results breaking all records were recently obtained by the Ralston cereal manufacturers, through one full page advertisement, which brought through the mail 151,355 coupons cut from their advertisement, and the same number, 151,355, of box tops taken from the Ralston cereal container. For each box top, those answering the advertisement had paid 25 cents.

The advertisement brought more than thirty-eight thousand dollars in cash and the company reported a sales increase of 46.9 per cent.

This particular advertisement was inserted in The Comic Weekly. "Puck" section, that, with "The American Weekly" is distributed with all the Hearst Sunday newspapers, going into 5,000,000 American homes.

These publications, "The American Weekly," and "The Comic Weekly Puck," constitute by far the most powerful advertising medium in the United States, having double the circulation of any other medium. Men anxious to build up business as conditions improve should know it.

The children in five million American homes, reading the Ralston advertisement in their comic weekly, caused their mothers to give to that advertisement the extraordinary response indicated above. That is important information for business men.

Ten millions or more in the United States are looking for work. In New York, 30,000 that had jobs, making men's clothing and fur garments, have quit on strike. Other thousands are expected to strike in other cities.

In New York 300 policemen, assigned to look after the strike, express the opinion that they will have trouble.

In Mussolini's country or in Hitler's, this sort of strike would be impossible. "The will" of the dictator would prevent it.

Perhaps a way will be found here to substitute justice and fair arbitration for a dictator's will, and for disastrous, costly strikes.

Europe, following President Roosevelt's message to the effect that this country will attend to its own financial business, seems to realize that the United States has resigned as paymaster and general factotum for lands across the Atlantic.

The Paris newspaper, La Volante, meaning "The Will," which has some importance, remarks that "Europe is being pushed toward economic self-containment," and thinks "the American attitude must open our eyes." It should do so to some extent.

La Volante's reference to "European economic self-containment" means Continental Europe, as opposed to the British Empire and the United States.

If Europe would definitely realize that this country is through making bad loans to Europe, and no longer proposes to take orders from European statesmen, that would be most acceptable to America.

Former Prime Minister of France, Herriot, writing in his newspaper, "The New Era," appears to possess an unusual grasp of world affairs outside the limits of the old Paris fortifications.

While other Frenchmen demand that Continental Europe go ahead without the rest of the world, Herriot says: "It is a joke to speak of a European front against the United States, without Great Britain, without Germany, without Italy."

He observes also that Great Britain would go with the United States, because if Great Britain did not, the Empire might have a break with Canada and Australia.

Germany's "Catholic Center" has dissolved. For years, with a Radical left on one hand and a Conservative right on the other, the "Catholic Center" has been a great influence in Germany, dating from the days of Bismarck. It throve, to some extent, on fear of Bismarck's opposition to the Catholic church, expressed in his well-known saying, Wir gehen nicht nach Canossa, "We are not going to Canossa." He referred to an incident in medieval history, when the German emperor, in humble submission, stood barefoot in the snow under the Pope's window at Canossa.

The dissolution of the German Catholic Center party is voluntary, and announced by the party as made "in agreement with the chancellor."

Dignitaries representing the Catholic church in Germany have warned Catholic priests against criticism of the German new rulers and new conditions.

30 MILLION JOBS ASKED AT PARLEY

U. S. Delegates Also Seek a Conference to Raise Wages

BULLETIN

London, July 7 — Strife broke out anew today between the French and American conference delegation when the committee on commercial policy voted 8 to 7 that tariff and quotas could not be dealt with by the parley.

London, July 7 (AP)—Senator James Couzens of Mchigan, in a straight - from - the - shoulder speech before the world economic conference this afternoon, urged the assemblage to continue working along lines which will insure that 30,000,000 of unemployed persons will be put back to work and prices will be raised to remunerative levels.

Likewise, President Roosevelt's world recovery program was brought to the front when a resolution was drafted in the American headquarters calling for world-wide action for shorter hours for labor and increased wages and agricultural prices.

Senator Couzens' speech was understood to be intended as an answer to Georges Bonnet, French finance minister, who said in an address today that it was impossible for the conference to consider any monetary matters pending stabilization of currencies.

SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

Mr. Couzens declared that finding employment for the jobless would solve many problems.

Recalling that America maintains the gold standard for a time while other countries abandoned it, he said:

"We found no faults with others nor uttered any complaint."

At another point the American senator declared dramatically:

"President Roosevelt, with the support of the people started out to raise price levels. From this purpose he has not dviated.

"And there is no reason to be-

BULLETIN:

Supt. Crowley was closeted with Governor Ely for 47 minutes today, and came out smiling. "I have nothing to say," he declared. "Any statement that is made will have to come from the Governor. I was sent for."

In a surprise move, Police Superintendent Crowley was "called on the carpet" at the State House today by Governor Ely—just 24 hours after Commissioner Hultman was grilled by the Governor in the matter of alleged police dereliction.

The first intimation newspapermen had that Crowley had been summoned to the State House was when he walked into the Governor's suite and sat down.

Questioned, he admitted that De-Witt C. DeWolfe had telephoned police headquarters and informed him the Governor desired Crowley's appearance.

Crowley's arrival came after Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis had handed him their formal answers to charges made against them in the grand jury "crime probe" report.

The superintendent passed these along to Commissioner Huitman, but his own report on the Hultman-ordered police investigation of the police department is not expected to be ready for delivery before Monday.

Meanwhile, along another front in the police situation, a break seemed imminent between Gov. Ely and Dist. Atty. Foley over the latter's refusal to turn over to Ely the grand jury minutes of the crime probe.

The district attorney today pointed to the Supreme Court ruling in the case of Jery Gedzium, "Jerry the Pole," since executed as a hold-up slayer.

Despite the fact that a man's life possibly hung on the decision, the Supreme Court ruled that the defendant, under the law, had no right to the grand jury minutes.

STOCK PRICES SURGE HIGHER

New York, July 7—Stock prices surged higher in Wall st. in a seething market today.

Many gains of $1 to more than a share were recorded after strenuous opening which saw blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares of leading issues change hands, and the tape soon fell 21 minutes in arrears.

Meanwhile, dollar exchange was scraping new bottom levels. Sterling shot up 16½ cents to $4.73 compared with its gold parity of $4.86⅝, while French francs jumped 14-hundredths of a cent to 5.59c.

Commodity markets were strong. Most of the wheat and corn deliveries opened 1 to 2 cents higher at Chicago, while cotton here had initial advances of 50 to 75 cents a bale.

Buying of shares was well distributed, although rails had something of an edge on other groups.

Foreign exchange circles attributed the dollar's decline to brisk speculative selling abroad.

50,000 Quit Work in War on Sweatshops

New York, July 7 (INS)—More than 50,000 workers in the men's clothing industry were out on strike today and expect to be joined by 20,000 more workers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The announced purpose of the strike, which is called a "temporary walkout," is to force wage increases and eliminate sweatshop conditions.

Cargoes of Liquor Run Right Into Shore by Big Vessels

New Bedford, July 6—There's no more Rum Row along New England shores.

Masked Reporter

The motor ships, coming down from Canada or from Nassau or Bimini with great liquor cargoes, don't bother to stop outside the 12-mile limit. They drive right into the lonely beaches of Cape Cod with never a Coast Guard patrol boat nor local policeman to stop them.

In a frenzied move to cash in on relaxed enforcement of the Prohibition Act rum racketeers of Cape Cod are throwing caution to the winds and are discharging huge mother-ship loads of liquor on the private estates of wealthy summer residents.

I watched the waterfront spectacle today—saw the high powered rum runners shove off from Kelly's Shipyards in Fairhaven on the three-hour run for Rum Row—saw the unregistered aeroplanes which have swarmed into the killing—saw the pitiful attempts of the wholly demoralized Coast Guard patrol to intercede.

I saw one of the ace rum runners of which an Attleboro man

Mothers Reclaim Children Taken by S.P.C.C.

After a night spent at the Somerville City Home, three children, whose mothers had left them alone overnight, went back to their own home today.

Guarded by a big police dog, they were found yesterday in their home in Washington ave., Somerville, by Robert C. True, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. True had to placate the dog with honeyed words to get in.

Their mothers appeared at the city home today and after a tearful reunion with the tots, declared it was untrue that the children were left without food.

The children are George, nine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan Rogers; Norman, 14 months, and Barbara, four, children of Mrs. Mabel Banfill, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers.

NOT LEFT HUNGRY

Happy over the big breakfast they had enjoyed t the city home in Broadway, but worrying about the fate of their dog, their five puppies and three kittens, the children were playing in a swing when their mothers arrived.

Mrs. Banfill rushed to the baby and hugged the child tightly, then hugged and kissed Barbara, while Mrs. Roegrs took her boy in her arms.

"This is the work of jealous neighbors," said Mrs. Rogers. "These children were not starving. My daughter and I had to go to New Hampshire on absolutely urgent business.

"We left enough food to last a week and arranged with two neighbors to look out for the children.

"We left the house Wednesday noon and returned Thursday afternoon, just five minutes after the children had been taken away. Some of the neighbors told me that a report had been given the society that the children were abandoned and starving.

OWNS PROPERTY

"Well, I called in all the neighbors and showed them the food, four loaves of bread, a dozen eggs, a pound of bolonye, some coffee already made and some rhubarb and strawberry jam.

"I was frantic. I couldn't reach th wright authorities to find out where the children were."

She displayed $45 to show that she was not without funds and showed tax bills from Somerville and Wilmington to prove she owned property. She said it was impossible, because of certain circumstances, to take the children with her.

Both mothers thanked Herman Reynolds, superintendent of the city home, and his wife for caring for the children and they all left with flowers picked for them by the superintendent's wife.

The mothers were home last night when another agent called at the house to take the pets away and he was not permitted to do so.

'I'M UNHURT,' TEXAN WIRES TO MOSCOW FRIENDS

Lost Since June 14, He Is Found in Frozen Wilds Near Route

Moscow, July 7—Despite the hardships of being lost for three weeks in the wilds of Asiatic Russia, James Mattern, Texas round-the-world aviator, is safe at Anadyr, district of Chukotka, eastern Siberia, according to word received here today.

Mattern's safety was disclosed in a telegram, dated July 5, received here today from Bacharova apparently a telegraphic post in far eastern Siberia.

There were no details to state how Mattern had landed or when, the message merely stating the flier was safe.

It appeared, however, that Mattern had landed in some isolated spot and then contrived to send a messenger to the telegraphic post to flash the news of his safety.

GAVE UP FLIGHT HOPE

Mattern dropped from sight on June 14 after taking off from Khabarovsk for Nome, Alaska, on an attempted non-stop flight of 2500 miles.

At the time he had lost all hope of setting a new record for a round-the-world flight, but he had hoped to become the first man to make the trip alone.

Anadyr is in the extreme northeastern section of Siberia, slightly north of the route Mattern had planned to follow.

It was in Anadir that Amundson was found in 1926 after being missing for 18 months in his polar flight.

TERSE MESSAGE

"Safe at Anadir, Chukotka, Siberia. Jimmie Mattern."

The message was sent from the town of Bocharova at 11 p. m. July 5 and was received here in mid-afternoon today.

News of the American, who had been unreported since he left Khabarovsk, Siberia, June 14, was received with jubilation in Soviet aviation circles where it has been believed that if the aviator had been forced down on land he had a good chance of escaping alive despite the fact that it would take him a long time to communicate with the outside world.

The fact that so much time elapsed between his descent and dispatch of the message indicated that he may have come down at some distance from an inhabitation, making it necessary for him to find his way laboriously to the nearest village.

That section of Siberia is very sparsely settled.

Anadir, or Anadyr, is a trading post on the Anadyr river in far northeast Siberia, north of the Kamchatka peninsula, near the Behring sea, and generally along the route Mattern took in attempting to fly from Khabarovsk to Nome, Alaska.

It was at Anadyr that Capt. Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, appeared in 1920, after having been lost in the Arctic seas more than a year and a half on one of his attempts to reach the North Pole.

Mattern Lost June 15 While Nearing Goal

New York, July 7 (AP)—James Mattern, around the world flier reported found safe at Anadir, Chukota, Siberia, today, had been unreported since June 15 when he left Khabarovsk on a hop to Nome, Alaska.

Mattern started his flight around the world from Floyd Bennett field on the morning of June 3 and made his first landing 24 hours later off the coast of Norway. From there he flew to Oslo, thence to Moscow and on June 5 took off on the long flight over Siberia. The next day he reached Omsk and after a stop of 12 hours took off again.

He was unreported for more than 24 hours but it was finally learned that he was forced down by motor trouble and that the plane's tail was damaged in landing. He finally reached Khabarovsk on June 10, one week after he left New York.

MANAGER PROVED RIGHT

He started for Nome, Alaska, on June 12, but was forced to backtrack because of bad weather. He hopped on his second attempt to reach Nome on June 15 and was unreported from that time. Mattern, a native of San Angelo, Texas, was attempting to break the world flight record of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty of 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes.

His plane "Century of Progress" is a monoplane with a bullet-shaped body, carrying 7000 gallons of gasoline, sufficient for a 28-hour flight. They were the same gas tanks used by Post and Gatty in their record-breaking flight.

Several days after Mattern had been missing Jack Clark, his representative, expressed the belief that it might be three weeks or more before word from the flier would be received. At that time, Clark said he believed Mattern had landed at some inaccessible spot in Siberia.

On June 29 a rescue expedition reached Terrace, B. C., where it was held by bad weather.

DOWN IN SIBERIA BEFORE

Mattern, whose previous attempt to circle the globe ended when he and Brettett Griffin cracked up in Siberia, was unreported on the present flight longer than any other long-distance flier.

There have been many instances, however, when trans-oceanic fliers have been missing for varying periods of time to be found later. The first was Harry Hawker, who in 1919 attempted the first non-stop trans-atlantic flight. He was forced down 850 miles west of Ireland and was picked up with his navigator by a tramp steamer. The ship had no wireless, however, and it was six days before the world knew of the rescue.

The same year one of three U. S. Navy seaplanes in the flight during which the NC-4 crossed the ocean, was forced down off the Azores and the crew saved.

Ruth Elder and George Haldeman were rescued off the Azores in 1927, by a Dutch tanker when a broken air line forced them down in an attempt to span the Atlantic.

Chicago Friends Get Message

Chicago, July 7 (AP)—The Chicago sponsors of Jimmy Mattern's attempted round-the-world flight today received a cablegram which they believed to be direct from him.

The message, slightly garbled, was interpreted to read:

"Safe, Anadir, Chukotka, Siberia.

(Signed) "Jimmy Mattern."

Another notable sea rescue was that of the late Commander John Rodgers and his crew of naval aviators who were found floating on the wreckage of their plane off the Hawaiian Islands in 1925. Missing for nine days on a flight from San Francisco to Honolulu they were sighted off Kaui.

In 1931, Willy Resty and Christian Johanssen, German fliers, and their Portuguese companion, Fernando Costa Virga, floated for 148 hours in a wave-buffeted plane, forced down on a flight from Lisbon to New York. They were finally rescued by a Norwegian motorship.

Capt. Ramon Franco and three Spanish companions, forced down on an attempted flight to South America, clung to their plane for nearly a week before being rescued in 1929.

Two fliers who braved perilous weather in a flight along the northern route to Europe and who were lost for days were Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer. They left Cochrane, Ont., in August, 1928, and disappeared. Generally given up for dead they were found alive many days later in Greenland.

The German and Irish fliers, the late Baron Guenther Von Huenfield, Capt. Herman Koehl and Col. James E. Fitzmaurice were thought for a brief time to have perished before they were discovered at Greenley Island off Labrador on April 14, 1928.

OTHER DARING RESCUES

In the summer of 1931, Cecil A. Allen and Don Moyle were lost while trying to fly the Pacific. Seven days after they had been given up for lost, a Soviet ship found them on an uninhabited island off the coast of Siberia.

About the same time, Capt. Lissandro Caray of the Honduran air corps, forced down on an ocean hop, spent 35 hours clinging to the tail of his ship before being picked up by a steamer off the coast of the Carolinas.

"Leave It to Jimmy; He'll Win," Says Wife

Walla Walla, Wash., July 7 (AP)—"That's the news I've been waiting for! Isn't it just wonderful! I knew he was safe all the time."

Mrs. James Mattern thus greeted news from the Associated Press that her flying husband had been reported found in northeastern Siberia today.

"Jimmy always has the faculty of taking care of himself," Mrs. Mattern said proudly.

U. S. Ship Only 300 Miles From Mattern

Washington, July 7 (AP)—The United States coast guard cutter Northland was 300 miles from Anadir (Anadyr), Siberia, yesterday searching for Jimmy Mattern, and was expected today by coast guard officials to get in touch with him at Anadir.

Rear Admiral H. G. Hamlet, familiar with that stretch of sea on the edge of which Mattern came down, wirelessed the Northland as soon as he received information that the flier was safe.

He expected the commander to communicate with Mattern, and if he needed help, that the Soviet authorities would arrange to transfer him to the Northland as soon as she could reach whatever place the Russian officials designated.

so that Hitler at present stands at the head of a Germany with only one political party, HIS OWN. And so it is with the other dictators, Mussolini, Stalin, Kemal.

In Ireland, where you least expect it, Fascism is forming an organization, the Army Comrades' Association, called the "White Army," recruiting members throughout the Irish Free State. The usual "shirt" appears this one blue, with darker blue shoulder straps and black berets.

There is a Fascist "salute," the arm raised high and stretched forward. All that will seem strange to those that remember Ireland in the old days of the "side-cars." The wearing of berets by Irishmen is bewildering. The world is changing.

Thomas E. Dewey, United States attorney, prosecuting Mr. Waxey Gordon for failure to pay income tax on bootleg profits, refused to give names of witnesses that he intended to call, because, said he, "If I give the names, my witnesses will be murdered before trial. Four witnesses have been killed already."

Now, a fifth, who might have talked inconveniently, is found murdered in a stolen sedan.

Killing the witnesses on the other side is new in legal procedure, and may prove more effective than the old "making sure of one juryman."

The British are surprised to learn that Canadians object to "haw-haw" English, generally called "The Oxford accent."

Canada prefers the American style of English in broadcasting, and in talking machine records, and changes are to be made accordingly.

Gradually, perhaps, Canada will decide in friendly fashion that it is not wisdom to keep a great section of the North American continent tied up to a little island off the west coast of Europe.

Canada may even decide to annex the United States, and this country would welcome the step, with the understanding that a majority vote would rule.

The ideal arrangement would be one government from the Panama Canal to the North Pole, Mexico, the United States and Canada, one big nation, ruled by the majority, full protection for minorities, plenty of prosperity.

HIS COURSE TO GATES OF HIS GOAL

Here's the route that "Smiling Jimmie" Mattern, the Texan, flew and the town he again put on the map after it had been forgotten for 13 years. It is Anadyr, Chukotka, Siberia, where Amundsen, South Pole finder, "came to life" in 1920 after being lost for 18 months in his attempt to reach the North Pole. Mattern was at the very gates of his goal—Nome, Alaska—as you may see by the map.

U. S. FRENCH CLASH

Franco - American controversy broke out anew today in the private session of the committee on commercial policy of the World Economic Conference which decided by an 8 to 7 vote that tariffs and quotas could not be dealt with by the parley.

The French delegation feared today that Great Britain was on the verge of breaking openly with the gold bloc and casting its lot with the American inflationary program.

Pushed by the dominions which favor immediate price-raising schemes, the British government yesterday without notice deserted the French on the question of adjournment of the conference.

BRITAIN COURTS INFLATION.

It was said that Great Britain is veering toward consideration with the dominions and the United States of price-raising projects which, it is believed, would be distasteful to gold standard countries.

A heated discussion upon the probabilities in this event was understood to have taken place today in the French delegation.

.....Assert's TED.

Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, added to the belief that his country is breaking away from the gold group when he asked the conference today to continue discussion of the entire agenda including monetary problems despite objections of the gold countries.

BONNETT ASTONISHED

Georges Bonnet, French Finance Minister, at this suggestion rose and expressed astonishment at the chancellor's attitude. He said that the gold bloc thought that the monetary questions were successfully eliminated yesterday from the program.

It was learned today that the following countries voted against considering tariffs: France, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The following voted for consideration of tariff question: The United States, Great Britain, Norway, Japan, Russia, Argentina and Cuba. The Uruguayan delegate was not present.

While the whole United States delegation had not formally approved the proposal for shorter hours for labor and increased wages and prices it was quickly accepted by several members and its sponsors expected to introduce it without great delay.

Pointing to widespread distress and unemployment in all countries the resolution declared for "lessened hours of labor and a steadily rising scale of wages and agricultural prices."

Exactly paralleling important features of President Roosevelt's American program for recapturing prosperity the proposal was advanced at a moment when conference action on monetary and tariff matters was blocked by the refusal of European gold bloc representatives to discuss those subjects.

WOULD BOOST PRICES.

Accordingly the Americans believed the way open for early consideration of their ambitious plan for shortening hours and boosting wages and prices.

The resolution does not specify the hours of labor to be sought, but James A. Wilson, an American Federation of Labor representative with the American delegation, has been advocating a 30-hour week.

Both the monetary and financial commissions met today to set subcommittees working on a revised agenda of subjects which could be dealt without venturing into the monetary topics which France and her gold bloc allies refused to discuss pending stabilization of currencies.

NEW SPIRIT SHOWN

An indication of a new spirit was given at the outset in the monetary commission when its chairman, Finance Minister Guido Jung of Italy, who had been one of the gold bloc supporters, declared that "We all feel it desirable to proceed with the work of the conference to the utmost extent."

Among those present at the meet-

MAY DISCUSS MONEY

Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer followed Signor Jung with the startling declaration that none of the items ought to be excluded from the conference agenda which was drawn up by a League of Nations preparatory committee and includes six major subjects.

This was interpreted by many as supporting the American desire that the conference should continue with virtually the entire program although it was decided yesterday to exclude monetary and tariff matters from discussion.

The British chancellor said it would be difficult to isolate the individual items on the agenda because delegations could hardly discuss one without bringing in the others.

M. Bonnet, who led the gold bloc attempt to force the adjournment of the conference yesterday, took the floor and while calling for a "truce" on monetary discussions asserted that "we have the success of the London conference at heart."

RICHARD DIX'S 'PERFECT LOVE MATCH' PLUMPS INTO COURT

DIVORCE COMES FOR STAR AND HEIRESS

"Incompatibility" to Be Grounds; Baby Can't Unite Them

Hollywood, Cal., July 7—Hollywood's calcium glare, which has melted like wax the marriage bonds of a hundred screen stars, today forced apart filmland's "model couple," Richard Dix and his heiress bride of less than two years, the former Winifred Coe.

The marital Moloch that is movieland, the insatiate devourer of happy marriages, has claimed another sacrifice.

The Dix separation, following closely the Pickford-Fairbanks breach, caused a sensation. There is no "other woman" in the Dix disruption. Dix was always a man's man. His first love was the silver screen. He was wedded to what in Hollywood is called big art.

In October, 1931, Dix eloped with Miss Coe, daughter of a wealthy retired Los Angeles wholesale grocer. So sure was he that Miss Coe was all the world to him then, that he made a bold statement to the world.

HOW THEY DO CHANGE!

"They say that marriage will wreck my career," said Dix. "Well, it will have to ruin it then. She's just the kind of a girl I've been waiting for. Doesn't care for parties, likes to stay outdoors and swim and ride . . . Oh . . . dear!"

The marital Moloch that movieland is, grinned at the words. And laughed out loud to hear the same Richard Dix, whose right name, by the way, is Ernest Carlton Brimmer, say today in admitting he and his wife had separated.

"Winifred is the sweetest girl in the world. She will make some other man a splendid wife, but she and I do not speak the same language.

"She is not interested in motion pictures while I hate the social life that she enjoys. She deserves only happiness, and I hope she will find the contentment I didn't seem able to give her."

PART ALMOST AT ALTER

Words like these have been the dirge of many a movie romance in the past. With Miss Coe gone back to her home and Dix secluding himself in his ranch, they foreshadow the interment of the romance which will take place soon in the divorce court.

Friends of the couple admit that they began to drift apart almost as soon as they were joined together. Mrs. Dix, they say, could neither understand nor endure the long periods of seclusion and silence on the part of her husband while he was making a picture.

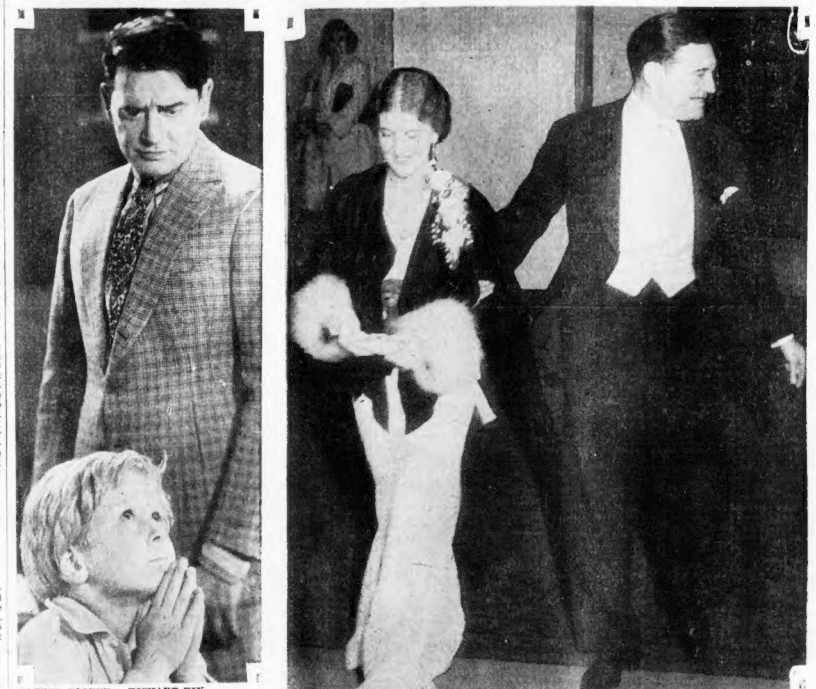
Art is a jealous mistress, say Dix's friends. Art doesn't countenance triangles, even when the third party is a man's legitimate and lawful wife.

The break in their love would have come much sooner, their friends say, had it not been for the arrival of the stork at the Dix home. One must welcome the stork with a smile. Dix and his wife did. Last January, a seven-pound girl came to grip their hearts and pull them close together again.

John D. at Tarrytown

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 7—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., arrived at his Pocantico Hills estate here "feeling better than ever."

Model Wife and Screen Favorite -:- Fail in One of Those 'Perfect Marriages'



JACKIE COOPER RICHARD DIX
WHEN THEY BROUGHT TEARS

Even a baby girl, born last year, failed to hold the Dixes together. Richard on the screen has shown great pathos in his portrayals of his love for children. In a late picture, "Young Donovan's Kid," he and Jackie Cooper brought audiences close to tears.

ANOTHER "MODEL MARRIAGE" THAT WASN'T

Richard Dix, favorite of the film world, and his "model" bride, the former Winifred Coe, of San Francisco, are the latest members of the film colony to start along the road to the divorce court. The couple, shown above, separated last night after a married life of two and a half years.

BEAU BRUMMEL'S LOVE HIS ART

Richard Dix, the Beau Brummel on and off the screen. His roles run from Indian to fortune teller, fighting man of the West, as in Cimmaron, and a devil among women in several pictures. But his screen life has a far greater hold on him than his real life, with a beautiful society woman for his wife.

DIVER BRINGS UP CLUES TO RIVER DEATH

Willard's Glasses and Customer List in the Mud at Medfield

Medfield, July 7—Volunteer divers who risked their lives in the muddy bottom of the Charles river today discovered what the family of Lawrence L. Willard, missing Natick radio salesman regards as additional evidence that he was drowned when his car ran off the road on the holiday.

Following the discovery of blond hairs on the windshield of the car in which Willard is believed to have met his death, March Purinton, lifesaver from Lake Walden, today found a pair of blue-tinted driving glasses, a list of prospective customers and a menu of "The Fairways," Osterville tea room run by Willard's wife.

LASILY LOST IN MUD

State police under Sergt. George Alexander of Framingham barracks cling to the belief that Willard lies buried in the muddy bed of the river. That the body could have disappeared in the mud, Alexander pointed out that the four volunteer divers who searched on both sides of Death Bridge, the scene of the supposed accident, sunk frequently up to their armpits in the soft ooze and were rescued only with great effort.

More than 50 Boy Scouts, including 23 from Providence where Willard's brother, the Rev. Wyeth Willard is pastor, searched all along the banks of the river today without finding any trace of the missing man.

The Rev. Mr. Willard and Police Chief Deacon Jackson, of Sherborn, rowed two miles down stream, dragging the channel, without result.

POLICE STILL PUZZLED

Police today were still trying to puzzle out how Willard's car, when taken from the river, was found to be in neutral and the ignition switch off. This first led them to believe that Willard's car had been deliberately pushed into the river and that Willard as not in the car.

At Osterville, where Willard's wife conducts a tea room and overnight tourist lodging house, his daughter Jean today refused to discuss her father's disappearance.

Miss Dorothy Alexander, 19, of Natick, who works at the tea room, told a Boston Evening American reporter today that Willard's disappearance was a mystery to them.

The four volunteer divers, who will continue their search of the river bed today, are John Heffernan, March Purinton, Leo Duggan and Henry McNamara.

Widow Weeps as Poison Trial Is Again Put Off

Trial for Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, Peabody widow charged with poisoning her fire-captain husband, William J. Costello, scheduled to start on July 12, was again postponed today, this time until July 17.

Announcement of the postponement was made following a conference between Judge Frederick W. Fosdick, Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg and defense attorneys.

It is the third postponement in the case, the original date being June 26. It was later put over until July 5, and then postponed again until July 12.

The new postponement was granted by the judge after the district attorney had stated that the murder case now being heard in its fourth week, in which three youths are charged with the slaying of Patrolman Francis V. Quinn of Lynn, would continue until next Tuesday or Wednesday.

"I must have at least four or five days to prepare the Costello case," Cregg told the judge, "and it will be impossible to go on trial as scheduled."

Mrs. Costello expressed great disappointment when informed of the delay by Atty. Francis E. Rafter at Salem jail. Her eyes filled with tears and she lost her composure for a few moments. But she recovered quickly and smiled, he said.

"It seems as if the fates are conspiring to keep me from leaving this place and getting me back to my home and children," she told Rafter. "But there is nothing we can do about it, I suppose, except grin and bear it the best we can."

Atty. William E. O'Brine, junior defense counsel, was more caustic in his comment.

"The district attorney needs more time to prepare his case," O'Brine said. "You know he has had only five months so far.

The new postponement was granted by the judge after the district attorney had stated that the murder case now being heard in its fourth week, in which three youths are charged with the slaying of Patrolman Francis V. Quinn of Lynn, would continue until next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Attorneys Rafter, O'Brine and William C. Clark will leave tonight for New York, where they will confer tomorrow at the Bellevue Hospital with Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, defense toxicologist.

Mystery in Loss of A. B. Fall's Portrait

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Interior department officials are mystified over the disappearance of an oil portrait of former Secretary Albert B. Fall.

It hung alongside others of former secretaries in the corridor of the interior department building. Recently some of the pictures were moved. Fall's was lost in the shuffle.

BALBO ARMADA POISED TO HOP

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 7 (INS)—Five supply ships of the Italian Air Armada, stationed between Iceland and Greenland, reported favorable weather conditions today as the 24 seaplanes remained moored here pending the take-off on the next stage of their flight to the Chicago World's Fair.

Although it was hardly expected the air jaunt would be resumed today, Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister in command of the armada, ordered his pilots to be ready for a sudden departure.

The next stage of the flight will take the planes to Cartwright, Labrador, according to the schedule. Should flying conditions prevent, provision has been made to permit the planes to alight on the coast of Greenland.

The flight to Labrador, where everything is now in readiness for the armada's arrival, will be the most dangerous of the entire trip. It will take the fliers over 1500 miles of the most treacherous portion of the North Atlantic.

Gen. Balbo, acting upon Premier Mussolini's advice to put safety before speed, is determined not to hop off until assured flying conditions will meet his requirements.

In the summer issue of the Free Rental Directory you will find complete listings of summer camps and cottages, cool rooms and apartments, anything and everything to aid you in solving the summer-home or new-home problem.

NAVY YARD MEN WIN TRANSFERS

Washington, July 7 (AP)—Henry L. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of Navy, today informed Rep. Rogers (R., Mass.) that dismissal of a number of engineers, draftsmen and architects at Boston Navy Yard would be averted by transfer to other yards.

Some of the men, he said, will be transferred to the office of the supervising constructor at the Bethlehem Shipyard in Quincy, and others will be sent to the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, where work will be started at once on plans and specifications for submarines to be constructed under the administration's public works program.

Burglars Tear Shirt Off Aged Man's Back

Concord, N. H., July 7—Police today were seeking robbers who were so desperate that they stripped the shirt off 70-year-old William Leclair, of Franklin, after robbing him of his watch and 89 cents.

Two men invaded his home, near here, shortly before midnight. Dissatisfied with their meagre spoils, they demanded his shirt. When he refused it, they tore the garment from his back.

Printing Industry Urges 5-Day Week

New York, July 7 (INS)—An eight-hour day and a five-day week, with a standard minimum wage adjustable with living costs in different localities, is called for in the tentative code governing the printing industry, announced today by the New York Employing Printers Association. The code follows closely that drawn by the United Typothetae of America.

Tropical Storm Heads Into Mexico

Brownsville, Texas, July 7—A tropical storm which swept from the Gulf of Mexico toward the mouth of the Rio Grande had apparently turned southward and over a sparsely settled section of Mexico between Brownsville and Tampico, in the state of Tamaulipas.

Vermont Rail Finds Business Better

St. Albans, Vt., July 7—Despite the usual seasonal letdown, the Central Vermont Railway lines in New England were enjoying a moderate increase in business, Edmund Deschenes, general manager, told directors at the regular quarterly meeting today.

Bearded Lady of Sea Now Sailor's Bride

Baltimore, July 7 (AP)—Mrs. Malvina Emily Perry, the bearded lady of Baltimore waterfront, and former sea captain, today was the wife of an ordinary seaman who once sailed under her command.

She was married yesterday to Joseph Edward Cheeseman, whom she said she promised to marry when she "taught him to steer the ship and box the compass." They met less than two weeks ago after not having seen each other for 10 years.

Mrs. Cheesman has a 14-year-old son by a previous marriage. She claims she is the only woman in the world who has a full master's sailing license.

Machine Maker Dead

Nashua, N. H., July 7 (AP)—Herbert L. Flather, 58, president of the Flather Co., lathe manufacturers, died at his Nashua home today after several weeks' illness.

CULLEN TELLS OF SLAYING

Salem, July 7—Cross-examination of Edward Cullen, of Salem, who testified yesterday that Joseph Scrow and Tony Buffa, his companions, shot and killed Patrolman Francis V. Quinn, of Lynn, as the officer pleaded for a "break," will be resumed in Superior Court here today.

Cullen was under questioning by Atty. Warren Patten, of Boston, counsel for Scrow, when court was adjourned for the day by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick. Patten's cross-examination is expected to consume most of the morning session today. After this two witnesses will take the stand and their testimony is expected to support that of Cullen.

New Offensive on Paraguayan Front

Asuncion, Paraguay, July 7—An official announcement said heavy fighting was continuing in the Fort Nanawa sector of the Gran Chaco between Paraguayan and Bolivian forces. The communique added that Paraguayan forces had repulsed five attacks during the morning.

War Bride Held in Husband's Death

Halifax, N. S., July 7—Mrs. Lillian Price MacIntosh, English war bride, was committed to stand trial for the murder of her husband, Harry D. MacIntosh, at their home May 30.

Court Bans Home-Run Hits Out of Savin Hill Park

Future Babe Ruths and Bill Tildens who use Savin Hill Park for their training ground will have to smite the horsehide and the fuzzy rubber spheres with less vehemence or else—

Well, they're apt to be barred from playing there or the park department will have to erect fences to keep youngsters from annoying adjacent property owners.

In jury-valved session of superior court today, Judge Qua granted a temporary injunction on complaint of three residents of Grampian rd., Dorchester, to restrain youngsters from hitting home runs through parlor windows or scoring aces in some neighbor's eye.

The petitioners, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. K. Swedman and Maude V. Hartnett, complained their lawns were being ruined by baseball and tennis players retrieving balls hit out of the park. They complained several windows had been smashed and that William Hartnett, husband of one of the petitioners, was assaulted in his own yard when he objected.

The petitioners also protested the sight of young couples who woo in the park.

Judge Qua said, in granting the temporary order, effective July 17:

"I want to go only so far at present as to prevent missiles from being thrown on the petitioners' property and to stop trespassing on their property. The final decree may grant the petitioners their full prayer of barring games at this park."

The injunction was granted without the knowledge of either Park Commissioner Long, or of the city law department.

At the office of Samuel Silverman, city solicitor, it was said that the park department will probably erect fences around Savin Hill park before the next hearing on the injunction, thus removing the cause of complaint on the part of the petitioners.

LIQUOR BOARD HEARINGS TO BE SECRET

The State Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission has decided to emulate the "star chamber" sessions of the Governor's Council.

Chairman William P. Hayes of the commission announces that the hearings before the commission on appeals taken from decisions of the granting of licenses by local authorities are to be strictly private.

The only information that will be given out, the chairman said, is the formal decision of the commission on each appeal case.

Asked in regard to an appeal case already heard before the commission in which it was alleged the prospective licensee was told he must buy so many barrels of beer from a certain local beer boss, Commissioner Hayes said,

"We are not going to accept hearsay evidence. And in that case there was some hearsay evidence."

The decision of the commission to hold secret sessions on complaints of this nature is regarded by many legislators on the Hill to be in direct violation of the spirit of the bill creating the commission.

The commission's decision is expected to be the subject of much heated corridor talk in both branches of the legislature and may lead to the filing of a bill to compel the commission to hold public hearings.

The only body that holds meetings behind closed doors at the State House is the Governor's Council.

Nazis 'All Highest' Now, Says Hitler

Berlin, July 7 (INS)—"The Nazi party has now become the state. All powers lie with it."

This was a highlight of a speech delivered by Chancellor Hitler to his "stadthalters," appointed to rule with powers once enjoyed by cabinets and diets.

"History will not judge us by how many economic leaders we have deposed or arrested, but by whether we are able to provide work for the jobless," Hitler said.

"We must be able to replace them we have deposed by better men."

The speech was interpreted as a rallying cry to the state officials to continue solidification of the third Reich and a warning not to use wide powers indiscriminately.

Flier to Blaze New Route Over Ocean

Toronto, July 7—J. D. M. Gray, 40, will take off from Liverpool within three weeks to blaze a new air route to Canada and transport the first air express shipment ever to be carried from the mother country to the Dominion.

Plans for his long contemplated flight via Iceland and Greenland have been completed.

Box Theft, Fire Fail Police

Plymouth, July 7—Police here today are engaged in trying to solve two of the most difficult problems which have ever come to their attention.

Mystery No. 1 concerns a basket of laundry which was placed under the doorstep of the home of Edward Thomas in Oak st. and set afire. Thomas discovered the blaze and made a "one-man stop" with his garden hose. It is up to police to discover who placed the laundry there and set it afire and why.

Mystery No. 2 concerns the apparent kidnaping of a large refrigerator, five feet in height and three feet wide. The refrigerator disappeared from the auto of Roy A. Weiss, a New York summer visitor. Weiss told police he parked the machine for a short time in Chilton st. and when he returned the refrigerator was gone.

Ferret May Yet Save World From 'Flu'

London, July 7 (AP)—The prospect of producing serum to make humans immune to influenza has been brought nearer by the discovery that ferrets can be infected with the influenza virus.

The announcement of the finding was made in part by newspapers recently, and today received confirmation by the Lancet, journal of British medical men, when named as discoverers three doctors, Wilson Smith, C. H. Andrews and P. P. Laidlaw.

The inability heretofore of finding an animal susceptible to "flu" infection hindered experiments, but the ferret, a small, weasel-like animal, came to the rescue.

Tests confirmed the belief that influenza is partly due to a germ that can pass through filters, from which scientists hope to prepare an effective serum.

Doug Visits Only Lady Ashley

London, July 7 (US)—Conservative England continues to be surprised at Douglas Fairbanks' Houdini methods. He only emerges from his hiding place long enough to visit the bedside of Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawke, who is a patient at the Countess of Carnarvon's nursing home.

Lady Ashley is a member of the social set with which Fairbanks has been associated. Reported telephone calls at his hotel fail to get one word from Mr. Fairbanks on his marital separation from Miss Pickford.

The only information received came from a close friend of Mr. Fairbanks, who said there had been no telephone conversation and no cablegrams exchanged between Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford.

PAIR IS HELD IN MAN'S DEATH

Sherbrooke, Que., July 7—Mrs. Wilfrid Beaupariant, 50, of Chetham, Que., and Zephirin Fontaine, 50, of East Hereford, Que., today were held for trial at the next criminal assizes on a charge of slaying Joseph Langlois, 61-year-old farmer-lumberman, whose mutilated body was found near his East Hereford home a month ago.

Joseph Beauchein, 62, of Bury, Que., arrested with Mrs. Beaupariant, was freed today by Magistrate Couture, who found evidence was not sufficient to show he was implicated.

Two Nominated

Atlantic City, N. J., July 7—Mrs. Roche, of Nashville, were nominated for president of the National Chase Going Woodhouse of Greensboro, N. C., and Miss Nellie J. Association of Altrusa Clubs.

ROOSEVELT IN NEW DRIVE TO AID U. S. TRADE

Washington, July 7 (US) — Cheered by continuance of the London economic conference, President Roosevelt today proceeded with a two-fold objective of raising domestic prices and building up American foreign trade.

Privately, administration officials regarded the successful effort to block adjournment of the world parley as a great diplomatic victory for the United States.

One of the main reasons President Roosevelt declined to stabilize the dollar at this time, it was learned, was his desire to make a strong bid for markets of South America, Soviet Russia and the Orient, particularly China.

With the dollar depreciated, American made products are in a far better position to compete with foreign goods than at any time since the depression started.

The President's desire to build up economic relations with Russia and China has been illustrated by loans extended to those countries recently to buy American products.

Administration spokesmen said President Roosevelt's plans for reviving American foreign trade will form one of the most important phases of his industrial recovery program.

BOSTON STOCK FIRM FIRST

Washington, July 7 (AP)—The first registration certificate under the new securities law, detailing a $3,000,000 issue of trust shares, was filed with the Federal Trade Commission today by the Massachusetts Investors Trust of Boston.

Officials of the company were on hand when commission offices opened to make the first registration statement.

The government fee on a $3,000,000 issue is $300.

Because the commission's form was not completed until late yesterday, the company filed its report in accordance with its own interpretation of the securities act.

For the next 20 days, the men who float new issues may record them with the Federal Trade Commission. But after July 27, they must.

As rules for enforcement of the securities act became effective, the trade commission announced that its aim not only was to protect the public but to refrain from hamstringing "honest and reputable investment dealers."

McDowell and Bride Off on Honeymoon

Worcester, July 7—Putnam McDowell, vice president of the Federal Life and Casualty Co., of Boston, and his wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Hoyt, who were married here at the home of the bride yesterday, started on their honeymoon early today. On their return they will go to their summer home at Nonquit, taking up their residence in Wellesley Hills in the fall.

Malden Girl Held in Theft of Ring

Charged with the theft of a diamond ring from her sister, Frances Rabideu, 12 Trayes ave., Malden, was arrested by Sergt. J. C. Cronin and Special Officer William M. Butler at her home yesterday on a fugitive from justice warrant and was turned over to police of Exeter, N. H., to face charges there. She waived extradition and denied any theft.

Dorchester Woman Struck by Auto

Mrs. Margaret Hanlon, 50, of Quincefield pl., Dorchester, was recovering at her home today from injuries received when she was struck by an auto while crossing the driveway on the grounds of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton.

Edmond J. Sullivan of Faneuil st., Brighton, was operating the machine.

Two Surrender in N. Y. Racket Probe

New York, July 7—Jerome Kilik and Charles Barrett, warrants for whose arrest in connection with alleged racketeering in Fulton Fish Market were issued last week, surrendered here and pleaded not guilty to charges of coercion and conspiracy.

They furnished bail of $1,000 each for trial on August 10.

War Veteran Ends Life With Gas

Woonsocket, R. I., July 7—Amos Bricault, 50, was found dead in the kitchen of the house where he rented here. Police said he had committed suicide by inhaling gas.

Bricault was a Spanish-American war veteran and also had served in the Canadian forces during the World War.

HANDS THE REAL BRAINS

The HUMAN HANDS ARE THE PARENTS of the HUMAN BRAIN
IN FAILING to ADAPT HIS HANDS to ONE or a FEW HIGHLY SPECIALIZED USES, MAN PAVED the WAY MILLIONS of YEARS AGO for ALL MODERN INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT
The MONKEYS and APES, CLOSEST to MAN in INTELLIGENCE, also HAVE THE LARGEST VARIETY of SPECIAL USES for THEIR HANDS — YET THEIR HANDS ARE LIMITED in their USEFULNESS
DUNCE
BIRDS ARE RELATIVELY STUPID because THEIR HANDS WERE TRANSFORMED into WINGS that HAVE NO OTHER USE...
IN THE INVERTEBRATES, ACTIVE INTELLIGENCE APPROACHES ZERO because THESE CREATURES DO NOT HAVE HANDS of any KIND.

Did you know that your hands are the parents of your brain? It's true, according to the theory just announced in a British medical journal. The hands of the ape and monkey are limited to usefulness—chiefly clamping instruments. The theorist goes farther to tell us that the oyster would have a busier life if he had hands and for the bird it is pointed out that they are relatively stupid because their hands were transformed into wings that have no other use.

RUM SHIPS FLOOD CAPE

holds a "piece" throw up a saucy smoke screen as she whirled out of Kelly's yards in broad daylight, run in a straight line to the lone coast guard patrol at the mouth of the harbor opposite Fort Rodman with a flippant invitation for the Coast Guard to come aboard for inspection.

I saw the patrol boat in a gesture of hopeless resignation let that rummy pass without inspection and continue on her way to Rum Row. The barrier that has broken down and no longer serves as a bulwark against smuggled contraband.

GOLD RUSH UNDERWAY

Proof lay before my eyes today that Rum Row no longer exists. There's a gold rush on among the big-time rum runners to land everything that yields huge profit —and that does not mean liquor alone.

Some of the less scrupulous runners are smuggling drugs into Cape Cod. It's easier and more profitable to land dope and there's a lot of it being beached on these lonely sands.

The smugglers have a way of keeping check on Washington and the orders issued there. Weeks before the transfer of Commander Roderick Patch from the Woods Hole coast guard base the rum kings knew it was coming. He left there two weeks ago. And they knew the patrol that worked such havoc under his command in the past four years was going to be cut more than 50 per cent.

The rum lid was declared off Cape Cod three weeks ago. Speedy rum boats, long inactive, were rushed into service, but it wasn't long before the astute bosses found they didn't need freighters from rum row to the beach. They found they could run the mother ships in with safety.

Then they added airplanes to their equipment. Today there are at least ten unregistered planes operating along Cape Cod. I saw today a copy of a letter sent by a government official two weeks ago to another official reporting unregistered planes in this area and the letter has not yet been answered.

From a pier in Fairhaven today I saw two unregistered planes take off and fly in the direction of Rum Row. They've been flashing in and out of the harbor for two weeks. Customs inspectors in this port know their business but are powerless to interfere. While all this activity goes on at sea and waterfront, the Rum Kings are tying up business on the mainland. In the past two months no less than nine exclusive clubs have opened their doors to the wealthy summer residents of Cape Cod.

FRONT MASK FAILS

These clubs are protected by Massachusetts politicians whose voices are often heard in debate on Beacon Hill and in less serious moments in gay spots along the Cape.

I have in mind one place which had a spectacular seasonal opening below the Canal two weeks ago, attended by some of our illustrious office holders and social celebrities.

The sporting gentleman who is "fronting" that spot is one who has excited admiration among the racket men operating along Cape Cod many years. I would remind him however, that he is not "kidding" me as to his connections to the throne which bosses all rackets in this state.

Ah, well, the season is just openin., on old Cape Cod. Goodness knows how many things will happen to destroy the peace of mind of those who are now basking in the golden sunshine of private beaches and waiting for reports that record cargoes have landed under the eyes of local and state police.

Tomorrow the Masked Reporter will describe the sea routes the rum runners follow, the difficulties which confront federal inspectors in tracing rum-ship radio stations and other angles of the frenzied rush for rum gold along Cape Cod.

U.S. TO ABANDON NAVAL PACT

Washington, July 7 (US)—The United States is prepared to abandon the London naval treaty when it expires Dec. 31, 1935, Universal Service learned, as the Roosevelt administration moved to extend its policy of nationalism to naval armaments as well as economics.

Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, who came to Washington yesterday, will not return to the Geneva disarmament conference committee discussions at this time, the State Department revealed.

The department said Hugh R. Wilson, minister to Switzerland, had reported the work at the disarmament conference would not require Davis' presence in Europe for "the next two weeks," and added:

"Davis will not sail as he had planned but will hold himself available to return at any time when it appears that his presence in connection with the disarmament work is necessary."

Davis spent nearly two hours at the White House and upon leaving told newspapermen he "may return" to Geneva next week. It was understood, however, if he does so it will be merely to clear up some tag-end matters there, and not to resume any active arms discussions.

EIGHT HUNTED IN MASSACRE

Kansas City, July 7—The Department of Justice has ordered the arrest of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, Oklahoma killer; five escaped Kansas convicts; Verne C. Miller, former Huron, S. D., sheriff, and William Weissman, in connection with the machine gun slaying of four officers and their prisoner, Frank Nash, at the Union Station plaza here June 17.

The announcement by Director of Police Reppert that Miller and Weissman were known to have had a part in the slaughter, was followed today by the appearance of circulars issued by the United States bureau of investigation, asking for the arrest of Floyd and the five convicts.

BOND Half-Yearly SALE
TWO TROUSER SUITS

"What's the idea of 'shooting the works' with such a deep cut, when prices are moving up?" excitedly 'phones one of our executives. "Are you fellows crazy?"

No Sir! We're not!! And here's the idea: Prices may be going up, but lots of us haven't got more money to spend—yet. A good suit of clothes at a healthy saving is still mighty good news to thousands of men who are waiting for such a break. We've given it to 'em for many years. We're not going to back down now!

"This season's suits must be sold this season" is still good common sense and fair play.

And what a choice! Just to give you an idea, we've listed a few of the famous woolens in the panel next door. Only our staples have been put aside. Everything else goes! So, if you've had your eye on a new suit—and your mind on a lower price—here's your chance to make the double-play.

MOTHER GOES OUT TO PLAY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Make way on the playground for the matriarch of the kitchen—the Missus.

For the good little woman is going to utilize that leisure time she's heard so much about but never found the time for before—out-of-doors on the athletic field.

And hands and arms that swing pots, pans, dust rags and brooms ar now swinging at balls and bats on the Mission Hill playground, Roxbury. It's the beginning of a concentrated movement to take mothers out of the kitchens in the afternoon for a recreational program of simple sports.

Roxbury mothers in the Mission Hill district made their first appearance yesterday on the playground, where, with the reckless abandon of rejuvenated youth, they showed their growing boys and girls what "the little woman" could do.

The innovation is the result of the joint aims of the Community Service Association and the Boston Park Department, the latter giving the program supervision through the playground director, Miss Dorothy Kelly, graduate of the Posse Nissen School of Physical Education.

One of three playgrounds beside the Mission Church, this special lot of land has been set aside for mothers and their grown daughters only. And on this field, the queens of the kitchens will have an opportunity to exhibit their pent-up prowess at sports.

Older girls will also participate in the sports, rivaling the Misses in a jolly hors de combat.

Mrs. Cornelius R. Lucey of Gore st., Roxbury, one of many women who attended the opening performance of the playground series, was likewise one of the first to sign up.

Mrs. George Hargraves, Mrs. Edward Lyons and Mrs. Peter Carroll, all of Smith st., Roxbury, were others who played the game for what it was worth and had a grand time doing it.

And so the matriarch of the kitchen is soon to be the Diana of the playground.

PLAYGROUNDS FOR MOTHER

With mothers going in for playground sports, babies (note the carriages) get an outing, too. Mrs. Edward Lyons and Mrs. George Hargraves, both of Smith st., Roxbury, playing volley ball at the Mission Hill playground. Mothers are doing up their housework early these days to be able to spend the afternoons at outdoor sports. (Boston American Photo.)

Nazi's Music Greed Scored by Lehar

Vienan, July 7 (INS)—A charge that dollars and cents rather than patriotism lies behind Nazi Germany's prohibition of foreign popular music, was levelled today by Franz Lehar, world famous Viennese composer.

The gifted musician, who gave the world "The Merry Widow" and numerous other immortal operettas, said official announcement had been made that his works would be boycotted in Germany.

The real reason behind it," he said, "is financial.

"German Nazi composers are seeking a pretext to prohibit popular foreign music. I am not a Jew, therefore, as an excuse, I am accused of having once said that the German invasion of Belgium was a 'breach of contract.'"

Macon in Flight Off Jersey Coast

Lakehurst, N. J., July 7 (INS)—The U. S. Macon, new dirigible of the Navy, was reported cruising off the coast near Asbury Park at 10:30 a. m. today. Officials of the U. S. Naval Station said the ship had been as far as New London, Ct. On a test flight, and would continue flying along the coast for some time.

Women Veterans Ban Bonus for Selves

Pittsburgh, July 7—The Women's Overseas Service League ended its annual convention here with a declaration against payment of any bonus to women who served abroad during the World War.

LINDBERGHS IN TEST FLIGHT

New York, July 7 (INS)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh today had just about completed plans for their projected flight to Greenland to determine the feasibility of a northern air route to Europe.

They were expected to make a 1st flight this afternoon, it was announced at the Edo Aircraft Corp. plant at College Point, Queens, where their monoplane—the same one they used on their flight to China—is quartered.

When the Lindberghs will hop off on the first leg of their trip to Greenland was not known, but probably it will be in a day or two. Weather conditions recently have been ideal for flying.

Yesterday Mrs. Lindbergh was driven to the plant by her husband. She spent several hours in the cockpit of the plane, examining the instruments and radio apparatus installed this week. The plane will be equipped with pontoons.

White House Dog Goes Under Knife

Washington, July 7—Major, the White House police dog, was operated upon here today and is expected to go home after a period of recuperation in a dog hospital.

He was found to be suffering from growths under the skin.

Fliers Set for Hop Over Sea

New York, July 7 (INS)—Three fliers today cooled their heels at Floyd Bennett Airport, eagerly scanning weather reports for forecasts they hoped would send them speeding out over the Atlantic early tomorrow.

Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos, French airmen, are ready to start their transatlantic jump, on which they will try to set a new distance record. Wiley Post, Oklahoma aviator and co-holder with Harold Gatty of the round-the-world flying record, meantime, rushed last minute work on his plane and the Robot pilot he will carry with him on a new globe-circling flight.

'Dud' HammerBlows Up; Vet, Wife Hurt

Detroit, July 7 (INS)—Twenty months in the World War without seeing action and without suffering an injury was the boast of Alex Sears, 46.

Today he is in Receiving Hospital, his left hand blown off by the cap of a German shell he had kept as a souvenir.

Sears believed the shell was a "dud" and used it as a hammer last night. His wife was bruised and cut by fragments.

AIMEE FLEES TO RIVIERA

Paris, July 7 (INS)—Seeking peace and quiet to recuperate from her recent operation, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, Los Angeles evangelist, fled to the south of France today.

She slipped quietly away from the American hospital last night.

Her daughter, Mrs. Roberta Smith; her nurse, Bernice Middleton and Louis Meehan, a dapper courier also known as Mechal, accompanied the famous evangelist on her flight from the hospital to the south.

The evangelist hopes to live quietly at Monte Carlo and along the Riviera for a time, and then plans to proceed to Lucerne, Switzerland.

Brockton Boy Hurt in Fall Off Pole

Brockton, July 7—Gerald O'Reilly, 11, of 78 Forest ave., was on the danger list in Brockton hospital today, as the result of a concussion of the brain, spinal injury and fractured thigh, suffered when he fell from the ridge pole of a cottage to which he had climbed on the dare of a playmate.

Lady Astor 'Liaison Officer' to Soviet and U. S. Envoys

London, July 7 (INS)—With the aid of valuable work done by Lady Astor as an energetic "liaison officer," Prof. Raymond Moley is returning to the United States with reams of information concerning American recognition of Soviet Russia, it was learned today.

The American-born woman member of parliament was exceedingly active in bringing Prof. Moley and William C. Bullitt of the state department in close contact with Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, who has been representing Moscow at the World Economic Conference.

At her recent house party she deliberately seated Litvinoff between Bullitt and Senator Key Pittman of Nevada. While the guests were seating themselves, she pointed at Litvinoff and in a loud voice said to Bullitt with a laugh:

"Look out for this man. He's dangerous."

"I think we can hold our own," Bullitt was reported to have said. "There are two of us Americans against one Russian."

Now, Here's a Theft --50 Bbls. of Beer

In the way of keeping cooled off some lawless chap was very successful today, for not only did he steal a beer truck from right under the noses of the owners, but he stole with it 50 half-barrels of beer—all refrigerated.

The truck, owned by the Hittleman-Goldenrod Co., in Atlantic ave., had been loaded with cold beer and had been left by the driver in front of the office while he went in to get delivery papers.

He had been gone less than five minutes when the truck and the beer were discovered to be missing.

Modern "Fagin" Has Purse Stealing Class

New York, July 7 (INS)—A modern "Fagin" who schooled young boys in the art of purse snatching was sought today by Brooklyn police. Search for the director of the crime school started following arrests of two boys for purse snatching. Both told officers they had been taught to steal purses, turning over half their loot to their instructor, whom they described to police.

Men smile at my simple reasoning
Whenever the subject of cigarettes comes up, I sit back quietly and let the men explain about the "Toasting" process. Then, if they ask my opinion, I'm pretty frank and tell them why "Luckies please"—me, at least. After all, there's an intimate relationship between a cigarette and my lips—and I'm very sensitive about my personal daintiness. Certainly I enjoy Luckies' delicious tobaccos and their mellow-mildness—but the comforting purity of "Toasting" is what I prize almost above everything else. And that is a woman's reason for saying "Luckies Please!"
because "It's toasted"

PLAYED KIDNAP TO AID VICTIM

Atlanta, Ga., July 7 (AP)—A high school boy who helped kidnap John K. Ottley, 45-year-old banker, said today he did it so he could gain the victim's gratitude by helping him escape.

The youth said he was James Pryor Bowen, 17, son of a Lavonia, Ga., farmer.

As Ottley, president of the First National Bank and horseman of national reputation, drove toward his office, a fruit pedlar halted him, pushed a gun against his ribs and ordered him into the back seat.

Young Bowen drove him away as the pedlar kept guard. Blindfolded, Ottley was driven in a woods 20 miles north of Atlanta and forced to write his wife asking $40,000 ransom.

Young Bowen said he had come to Atlanta to get a job and met the peddler who proposed a deal whereby the youth would get "$10,000 easy" by "kidnaping a rich man."

"He told me all I had to do was stay with the man while he went back to get the money," Bowen said. "I figured I would go along and let the man go free as soon as I could. Then he would be my friend."

Boy Prevents Flood in S. Boston School

Boston today has another unknown hero. He is the boy who pulled the citizen's hook on a police box when a water pipe burst in the cellar of the John Boyle O'Reilly school, Dorchester st., South Boston. Police, answering the call, called water department workmen before any great damage was done. The boy, however, did not wait for the police to arrive.

West Medford Boy Injured by Auto

U.S. to Recover by Evolution, Say Writers

New York, July 7 (USI)—America's way to recovery is not by revolution, but by evolution, agree George Sokolsky and Raymond Moley in articles in the August issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, out today.

Sokolsky, who spent his childhood on the East Side of New York among fighters and radicals, and who witnessed the revolutions in Russia and China, writes:

"Sometimes people refer to the 'new deal' as a revolution. Such folk use words too loosely. A revolution does not involve a new deal; it involves a new deck, a new game. Revolutions are accompanied by bloodshed, by destruction of property. That is what revolution means, but that is not what those who want changes in this country mean."

Moley, assistant secretary of state and head of President Roosevelt's so-called "brain trust," writes:

"Fundamentally, the Administration's present program constitutes a move from the extreme reaction that has characterized the business and political world for some time, but it is far from being an expression of radicalism. Put into clear pattern, the whole program constitutes a complete plan of evolution."

ICKES ATTACKS SCHOOL CUT

Chicago, July 7—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes predicted an American dark age if the public schools were "devitalized by economies."

"If at this critical stage we continue to deny educational opportunities to literally millions of our children," the Cabinet member said, "our country will suffer when these millions uneducated undertake the responsibilities of government.

"What are we going to do about our schools is the most important question before the American people.

Shall we maintain them on such a basis as will equip our children as citizens in a self-governing republic, or are we going to let them slip back into an era of unenlightenment, bigotry and ignorance?"

Secretary Ickes spoke before a session of the National Education Association's convention.

COTTAGE CHEESE PIE

1 cup cottage cheese,
2-3 cup sugar,
2-3 cup milk,
2 beaten egg yolks,
1 tablespoon butter,
Pinch salt,
¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Mix the ingredients in the order given. Make a rich pastry and line a deep plate with it. Pour in the cottage cheese mixture and bake until firm. Cover with a meringue made of the two egg whites, 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Bake in a slow oven for about 15 minutes, or until brown. It may be garnished with halved cherries which are now in season, if desired. This pie can be served without the meringue if desired, and the whites of eggs used in cake for economy.

MILADY'S SALAD

4 slices tomato
¼ cup diced pineapple
¼ cup diced celery
Mayonnaise, parsley, lettuce.

Put a slice of tomato on a crisp of lettuce, mix together the pineapple and celery with a little mayonnaise, put a spoonful of this mixture on each slice of tomato. Top with extra mayonnaise, sprinkle with parsley and serve very cold.

CODFISH OMELET

Soak 2 cups shredded codfish in cold water for several hours. Drain. Add 2 cups mixed potatoes, cover with water and cook until tender. Drain and mash. Add 1 tbsp. butter and 2 well beaten egg yolks. Beat until light, season to taste and fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into hot buttered frying pan, cook until brown on bottom. Fold like an omelet. Serve at once.

HAMBURG SHORTCAKE

Make shortcake of 2 cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tbsp. butter, 1 tbsp. other shortening. Blend well and add ¾ cup milk and water mixed (equal parts).

While this is baking, fry 1 lb. hamburg steak, stirring constantly so it will not lump. Butter the shortcake, put meat between the layers. Pour well seasoned white sauce over top and sprinkle with paprika. A sprig of parsley may be added. Serve with French fried potatoes.

QUITE THE MOST FASHIONABLE EVENT

of late has been the Conference at Northfield . . . Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving aroused the interest of the smart young set in the conference and up they went for two weeks of meditation and instruction . . .

Among those whom we know who were in the party were Gertrude Peabody of Milton, Barbara Donald of Milton, Elizabeth Hobbs (who has done such good work at the Dispensary), Elizabeth Mixter, daughter of the Jason Mixters, and her cousin, the pretty debutante of this season, Betty Mixter, daughter of the Samuel Mixters . . . Anne Mixter, deb daughter of the Charles Mixters, did not go . . . and Connie Kimpton.

BETTY HOBBS

In the older group were Mrs. Thomas Motley and charming Mrs. Prout from Chestnut Hill . . .

Every year this is a smart summer event at Northfield but as one young thing said "This was the best ever!"

* * *

Polly Long of Marlborough st. and Cohasset has gone abroad for the summer with one of the teachers of art at the Beaver School . . . she will study drawing in Paris, and her friends are looking forward to seeing her sketches when she returns. Polly is a future debutante, daughter of the "Billy" Longs, and niece of Mrs. Chauncy Nash, ex-president of the Vincent Club. Mrs. Nash and Mr. William Perry have been for a year and a half restoring an old inn in Virginia . . . in the interin Mrs. Perry has run the Dartmouth Bookshop. Mr. Perry is now in the West and will take in the World's Fair before he returns.

* * *

The Charles Jenneys are to be at the Cantancit Club at Marion this season to be near the Arthur Mittons, intimate friends.

* * *

Barkers Summering at Marblehead

THE "BILLY" BARKERS (Mr. and Mrs. B. Devereaux Barker) are back again and having settled in their Marlborough st. abode at fashionable No. 100, have tucked themselves into a wee cot-for-two at Marblehead for the hot months . . . the little ferry which makes half-hourly trips across the bay makes it very convenient for a meal-a-day at the Barker's, Sr., on the Neck . . .

* * *

Margaret Lang, daughter of the Malcolm Langs, will be a deb of this year . . . she is the second daughter to be presented and looks like the Langs. Her aunt, Miss Ethel Lang, plays the organ at the Exeter Theater. Mr. Lang, her father, is a teacher of organ playing and a musical conductor. Miss Margaret is light, very fair with pink and white skin, blue eyes, plump and jolly. Another aunt is Mrs. Dudley Rannoy of Weston.

The Langs are an old Boston family of Brimmer st., and have great family pride. Margaret's debut will take place at a large dance at the Republican Club. Her mother, Mrs. Lang, was one of Boston's most popular belles. There are six Langs, all in petticoats . . . they congregate summers at the old Lang estate at New Boston N. H., a very cultivated and nifty family . . . all Miss Winsor's School girls with a host of friends . . .

* * *

Big People on a Little Street

LITTLE LIME ST., BEACON HILL, IS A street of Big People . . . there are the Julian Codmans, the Dr. John Palfreys, the Cliffords, the Winthrop Browns, the Siblys and the Nichols, not to forget Miss Mary OH! Porter on the corner of Lime and River, holding the keys of the debutante list . . .

* * *

Ellen Endicott has gone to Oxford, England, after teaching at Beaver School all winter after graduating from Vassar College. Her parents, the Harry Endicotts, are not to be on the North Shore this summer . . . they will stay at their place in Weston.

* * *

Mrs. Homer B. Richardson has had a house bequeathed to her this past year in Bath, Me., so she is leaving her estate at Nahant and has gone down East . . . she felt it was her duty to do this. Wouldn't it be great to inherit a house in Paris?

* * *

Vacationing in New Hampshire

MRS. MALCOLM BRADLEY FRENCH has been enjoying the weekend at The Waumbek at Jefferson, New Hampshire . . . she writes, "John Roosevelt, son of the President, has been staying at the White Mountains Polo Ranch, at Jefferson, where fifteen members of the polo camp already have arrived to take up polo instruction, the first game of the season being played on Sunday with the polo team of Danvers, Mass. Over 600 people from surrounding resorts attended.

"The polo field is owned by Mr. Edwin C. Bray, owner of The Waumbek, and several buildings have been erected to house the polo students.

"Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt accompanied her son to the polo camp, later departing to join the President at Washington. John will remain here all summer.

Margaret Lang

"There were so many magnificent cars drawn up at the side of the polo field it resembled a motor show . . . cars with plates from Boston, New York, Chicago, Charleston, S. C., New Jersey and even California. The setting is heavenly and we have never seen a finer looking bunch of boys than the group who are up there learning the sport of ponies."

Mrs. French returned to her beautiful home estate at Cohasset yesterday and will later motor to the World's Fair in Chicago.

FUTURE DEBUTANTES TAKE HAND AT ENTERTAINING

HAPPY FACES SMILE under summery skies at Cohasset and here you see a gathering of young Leonard folks. Elizabeth Leonard, daughter of Mrs. Winthrop Slade, Jr., is acting as hostess to her sister, Martha, and to her cousins, Betty Low and Julian Leonard, the children of the Julian T. Leonards of Brookline. Mrs. Leonard having been Margery Lake. They all had a great afternoon of fun at the recent garden party held in this popular South Shore gathering place of Greater Boston society. Society leaders from all parts of the South Shore assembled to patronize the event for charity. Many brought their children along and it was a regular reunion of the young folks. BOOKS---And Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Storm Jameson, the English novelist, who was born at Whitby, Yorkshire, in 1897, has written her autobiography. She calls it "No Time Like the Present" (Knopf)—an excellent title for such a book, particularly when it is written by one so young; but she proceeds to excoriate the time in which she lives, and life must be one long horror for her. It would seem that she is suffering from a war neurosis, since more than half the volume is taken up with a discussion on the wickedness of the late conflict. She lost her brother in the war, after he had received the Victoria Cross, and many of her young friends.

Her generation, she says, has suffered more than any other, and though she attempts to write quietly at times, for the most part she is shrieking at the top of her voice, condemning clergymen who approved of the fighting, breaking her heart to bits on paper, pleading for peace at any price.

We all want peace. The world is hungry for it, and sometimes the individual feels that anything he can do to bring it about is little enough. Not one of us, young or middle-aged or old, but was touched by the war. Life is not a running away from hard facts; it is a facing of them, not blindly, but with strong hearts and solemn faces. Miss Jameson is right in deploring the awful bloodshed in those bitter years between 1914 and 1918, were all deceived. It was to be a war to end all wars, and both England and America entered it with that high thought. Looking back, one wonders what else we could have done, shameful though it was.

One sympathizes with Miss Jameson's attitude now, but wishes that she could be more restrained in her arguments, more sensible of the cosmic forces at work on a planet that will never cease to be mysterious to those who dwell upon it. She would have women refuse to bear children if they are to be used merely as gun-fodder. Well and good. But we wonder how this could be accomplished. Miss Jameson forgets that, young though she is, another generation has now arisen which remembers nothing of the World War, and the women of that generation will go on bringing children into the world, despite all that may be said against so natural a process.

Lincoln's famous letter to a mother who had lost four sons in our Civil War infuriates Miss Jameson.

"In the end," she says, "I find a speech like this of Lincoln's very disgusting—and if it were said to me I should know what to do. Why should I pretend? If there were another great war and my son is killed in it I shall feel only hard anger, not a rag of pride.

* * *

She feels bitter against women who accept war.

"I wonder," she tells us, "that it has taken men so many thousands of years to realize that war is not more an historical necessity than witch-burning. We have outgrown one, and could, if we were so minded, outgrow the other. It is not past our cooler intellect to devise a social order which does not require war as a solvent. The will only is lacking."

How is that will to be made manifest? That is what all sane men are pondering just now. Religion seems to have failed us. Where else shall we turn?

The churches disgust Miss Jameson. She sees nothing fine in rearing a magnificent cathedral in Liverpool—a city overrun with some of the worst slums in England. If the money so spent could be diverted to education—yes, that is the solution.

* * *

The early portion of the book has great charm, no little distinction. Miss Jameson gives a fine and authentic picture of her childhood home in Yorkshire, and, later, a vivid sense of the London of prewar days—a kindlier, lovelier, more gentle London—where she was studying, with other young people, at the university. She was a shy, temperamental girl, who loved few people, and she is frank enough to admit that she was difficult to please. She fell in love with the wrong man, and made an unsuccessful marriage. I wish she had told more of this. But though she did not like people, she always pitied them, and she tells some touching anecdotes of her encounters, as a publisher's representative, with impecunious writers. She must be a sterling young woman; and again, she must be rather hard to get along with.

She always wanted to be a writer, but she confesses that the act of writing has often bored her. She was forced into journalism in order to make a living. Words have no color for her as they have for a born author. She wonders now why she has gone on with her work.

A nervous, jangling book, but one which will interest the serious reader.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

HAVE YOU NOTICED THAT SPORT DRESSES are getting shorter? An excellent idea, but the evening dresses are still sweeping the floor and white seems to predominate at many of the functions. Ginghams are popular, even being carried into bathing suits.

"Bubbles" Sortwell is wearing one of those natty bathing suits, but probably her most alluring costume is a deep aquamarine. The coat has a short cape and matching hat, in which the young lady presents an exceedingly modish figure.

Connie Matlass wears a coatee with big white puffy sleeves, a brown sport skirt and hat to match.

Mrs. Arthur Guild is wearing a dark blue to advantage, with lavish white organdie trimmings.

Mrs. Irving Paris and her small daughter, Miss Star Paris, are spending the summer at Hingham with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Russell, parents of Mrs. Paris. Mrs. Paris wears a snappy rough straw brimmed hat with a black and white ensemble that is charming on her. Mrs. Russell was seen wearing a smart black tweed swagger coat and wide-brimmed hat.

Mrs. Edward Brandagee wears a good-looking black and white ensemble, very neat and well tailored. Her daughter, Miss Martina Brandagee, whose engagement to Mr. James Lawrence, Jr., has just been announced, is wearing a neat outfit of navy blue with white trimmings. Her hat is wide brimmed, with a white organdie bow, and an attractive pair of blue suede pumps.

Mrs. James Phelan is wearing a fascinating black and white crepe with a sumptuous silver fox scarf. Black and white are lovely with Mrs. Phelan's blonde and beautiful coloring.

Mrs. Paul Clark is wearing an exquisite green and blue chiffon frock with a picture hat of dark blue straw trimmed with vivid green. Her daughter, Miss Jean Clark, who has her mother's lovely golden hair and blue eyes, wears a dainty print frock of brown straw hat, trimmed with yellow.

Miss Elizabeth Blanchard has a modishly frock of red and white print.

Mrs. David Percival is lovely in her squarmarine frock with trailing lace sleeves and brown picture hat trimmed with aquamarine. Have you noticed the natty brown mink fur cape she sports for cool evenings?

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

MRS. MARY S. HUPPERTZ and Miss Huppertz of Boston are among the recent guests at the Barbizen Plaza Hotel in New York city. They are on their way to the Century of Progress in Chicago, after which they will be in Scituate for August.

MRS. WILLIAM C. ENDICOTT, of Marlborough st., and Danvers, entertained members of the North Andover Garden Club at tea yesterday afternoon at her charming Danvers' residence. Mrs. Edmund F. Leland of Brookline entertained the same group at luncheon at her North Andover estate. Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Holden McGinley and Mrs. Gardiner Lane were among those who opened their beautiful garden to the North Andover Garden Club members during the afternoon.

ROBERT H. GARDINER, JR., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hallowell Gardiner of Brookline and Gardiner, Me., sailed yesterday from New York on the United States Lines, Washington, with a classmate at Groton, Roger Milliken of New York. They plan to tour Europe on bicycles, starting in Germany. Several other Groton boys, including Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., sailed on the Washington, their party going first to France and Spain.

FACIAL MASK FOR THE "TIRED BUSINESS WOMAN" THAT TAKES BUT LITTLE TIME

So-Called Dark Skins May Be Made Clear by Preparations Easy to Apply at Home

By Margaret Matson

WHILE WE'RE on the subject of facial masks that one can apply at home (we mentioned a few yesterday), let us tell you about one that takes only a small amount of time. For the "tired business woman" whose skin needs frequent rejuvenating a longer one is not always possible.

You take a half-cup of hot milk and mix into it enough almond meal to make a thin paste. This you spread over your face, neck and arms, and leave on for five minutes. Remove it with warm water, followed by cold. Do not use ice unless your skin is very hardy, for ice is too violent for the average skin.

After this you can massage a tissue cream into your skin if it is inclined to be dry and follow this with a mild astringent. Then you are ready for your makeup.

It's remarkable what difference an application of this sort can make in one's appearance. Often a so-called dark skin is dark only because the pores have not been thoroughly cleansed. And something of this sort which "digs deep" is just the thing to clear them. The skin seems to lighten immediately.

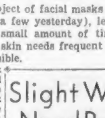
And speaking of skins lightening, there is a facial mask that one makes with almond meal, peroxide and rose water that is great for clearing up spotty skin and heightening their color. Should you wish us to send you the recipe, we should be very pleased to do so. This treatment takes about 15 or 20 minutes and should be used about once a week, depending upon the skin.

For any beauty problem that we can help you solve, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Margaret Matson, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. Mail is coming in very swiftly. If you haven't received your answer to date, please be patient. We are working hard to answer all of you. This department is continued each week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Slight Wounds Need Prompt Attention

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

"I SAW AN automobile accident the other day," a friend of mine said. "The ambulance surgeon gave each of the injured an injection which came from a small bottle labelled T. N. T." The doctor gave it to everyone who had received a scratch or cut, no matter how slight it seemed."



Dr. Copeland

My friend was right when he said the medicine was given to all who received minor injuries, as well as those who received serious lacerations and bruises. But it was not T. N. T. The label undoubtedly read "T. A. T." which is the abbreviation for "tetanus antitoxin."

This preparation promotes safety whenever the skin is broken and exposed to dirt, rust and roadside filth. Certain germs, called "tetanus bacilli," are found in the soil, and attached to rusty or dirty objects. The germs enter the body through abrasions and lacerations of the skin. In consequence a disease called "tetanus" or "lockjaw" may be caused.

At one time tetanus was a common disease. It was encountered particularly after gunshot wounds, lacerations of the skin, accidents from firecrackers or from stepping on rusty objects, such as nails and tin cans. Fortunately, this much dreaded disease is now combatted by the administration of the tetanus antitoxin.

This treatment prevents tetanus. But it is only successful if given immediately after the accident.

Beauty Queries and Answers

Sallowness

Question: My skin is extremely sallow. What do you suggest? Yours truly, Mrs. E. F. J., Lynn, Mass.

Answer: Back of the sallow skin is usually some digestive disorder. Before breakfast take a glass of water combined with the juice of half a lemon and a pinch of salt. Drink fruit juices and tomato juice. Eat half a head of lettuce each day.

Smarting Feet

Question: Recently you had an interesting article on the care of the feet. Mine smart and burn when I return from the office each night, and I should like to know if there is something in which I might bathe them that is not too expensive. Sincerely, Mrs. T. D., Brighton, Mass.

Answer: Ordinary baking soda is good. Put it in tepid water and bathe the feet each night before you go to bed. Dry them gently and massage them with cold cream for 10 or 15 minutes. Then wrap the feet in large Turkish towels which have been wrung out of cold water. In the morning, massage with boracted talcum. And it's helpful, too, to rinse your hosiery in a solution of borax.

Dark Spot

Question: For the past five years I have been troubled with a dark spot on my upper lip. It looks like a mustache but there is no sign of hair. This comes out plainer in the summer and is very annoying. Please advise me what I should use. Yours truly, Miss M. H., Belmont, Mass.

Answer: It is difficult to tell the cause of such a spot without seeing it. It might be well for you to see a skin specialist. Often spots of this sort can be taken off by acid or electricity but it requires an expert. It's much too dangerous for you to attempt yourself.

Soups Appeal Even During Hot Days

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

NOW COME the days when the ice box is more attractive than the kitchen range. Cool, summer salads and frozen desserts are the order of the day. And how good they taste!

But while we all delight in the fascinating possibilities of cool summer delicacies, nevertheless it's well to heed the warning of dietitians against too great an indulgence in cold foods exclusively. This is where soup occupies so important a place in the safe, healthful plan.

Great Variety

With the great variety of delicious soups available at your grocer's there is no longer any need of the housewife ever bothering to make her own soups, for these commercial soups are prepared by chefs who have made a life study of soup. Their knowledge of varieties and sources of quality ingredients is world-wide, and their soups are prepared and blended in kitchens that are comparable for cleanliness and efficiency with the best home kitchen.

As a matter of fact there are many of these soups which no housewife would even dream of attempting, so difficult are they to make, and impossibly expensive on a small scale. Yet they are available at no more effort than a telephone call to your grocer, and each is a masterpiece of the chef's art, as delicious and inviting as only the skill of French chefs can make them.

For Emergency

I'd truly be lost without my long row of canned soups waiting on the pantry shelf. For an emergency luncheon—a puffy omelet—and quick, Nancy—the vegetable soup. We heat a can of it undiluted, pour it over and around our puffy omelet, and bless the woman who won a big cash prize for this idea in a soup-recipe contest.

If we're having one or more hot dishes on our supper menu, then we use our canned soups chilled—the bouillon diluted with ice water and served with a sprinkling of parsley and cheese crackers, or jellied in our best glass bouillon cups. To do this heat one can of canned, undiluted bouillon. In it dissolve 1 tbsp. of gelatine that has been softened in ¼ cup cold water. Add ¼ cup of cold water and chill. When jellied, beat with egg beater for just a minute and pile in bouillon cups.

Slimmer Lines Set Off With Smart Cape

By MARIAN MARTIN

HERE IS A WOMAN no longer slender who has chosen a most flattering frock—slenderizing as well as modish and with smart details perfect for warm weather. The scalloped cape is cut deep, and follows the surplice line of the bodice; skirt panels join the yoke with pointed seaming for slimness. Ideal would be voile, swiss, lawn or chiffon.

Pattern 9432 may be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3½ yards 39-inch fabric. Clear, diagrammed cutting and sewing instructions included with this pattern.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern ordered.

Send your order to Boston Evening American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th st., New York, N. Y.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

Hospital Romance

"But, Eleanor," Jim protested, "why go to a large city?" My salary's enough to get married on, and I have a future here. We could be happy, Eleanor. Why won't you say 'yes'?"

Eleanor Kenton was silent for a moment. She and Jim Harris had been keeping company for a long time.

He waited anxiously for her reply.

"I'm sorry, Jim," she said finally, "I've made up my mind to try the stage. I'm here in New York to take a course in dramatic training."

His heart fell as he recognized the finality of her tone. From experience he knew that argument was useless.

The day set for Eleanor's departure for New York finally rolled around, and Jim sadly saw her off on the train.

For the first few months after she had left Scranton Eleanor had written Jim regularly, but soon the intervals between letters grew longer, and they finally ceased entirely.

It was more than a year later when Jim accepted an offer of a position on the staff of a Chicago newspaper. Efforts to get in touch with Eleanor had finally led him to accept the position.

His new employers found his work satisfactory, and Jim gradually rose to the position of assistant city editor on his paper.

He had been working late one night when catastrophe struck without warning. Searing pains shot through his stomach, centered on his right side. Doubled up and helpless, he was rushed to a hospital, where examination proved the need of immediate operation. And no sooner had the doctors decided upon it, than he was rushed to the operating table, and an emergency operation performed for appendicitis.

The next day, his nurse, Mary, a pleasant, pretty young girl, approached him diffidently.

"Mr. Burris," she said, "I wonder if you'd be willing to swap some of your papers for some magazines. You see," she rushed on, "there's a young lady in the next room, who's in the same position you're in. She's an actress. Hurt her back in an automobile accident, and the inactivity's getting too much for her. I thought —" and she paused in confusion.

Jim smiled happily for the first time in days. "I'd be glad to," he answered, and added: "Please give the young lady my regards, and best wishes for a speedy recovery."

Until his discharge from the hospital, the nurse brought Jim news of his neighbor, and the contact aroused his curiosity. He determined that he would learn the identity of the girl. Two nights later he sent a bouquet of flowers to her room, and the next night, put in his appearance at the hospital.

He hesitated a moment outside her door, knocked discreetly, and entered. And a moment later, his knees almost failed to support him as a familiar voice said happily: "Jim! I thought you'd never come!" It was Eleanor!

"You see, Jim," she explained some minutes later. "I knew who you were. The nurse told me."

"But darling," he asked, "what happened? You never wrote, and I thought you didn't care."

"It wasn't easy, Jim," she said soberly. "I couldn't get anywhere and I was ashamed to admit that I was a failure.

Jim laughed. "It isn't too late to start over again, Eleanor," he said. "I have a good job, with a future. We could get married on my salary."

"Oh, Jim, do you really mean it?"

He proved that he did.

The 12-Day Diet for Skin Beauty

THIRD DAY

About a half hour after the morning bath, take one generous helping of broth made with beef, lamb and vegetables, the recipe of which follows:

1½ lbs. spring lamb, with some bone
1 lb. lean beef
2 medium-sized potatoes
3 small carrots
1 stalk finely sliced celery
1 large mild onion
3 peeled ripe tomatoes, or 1 medium-sized can of tomatoes
2 tsps. salt
1 bayleaf
3 peppercorns

Place meat in large aluminum pot and completely cover with cold water. Add salt and spices, and cook meat very slowly for 2 hours, barely simmering over a slow fire. After 2 hours, add the vegetables finely cut up. Cook vegetables in soup stock without removing meat, for 45 minutes. Skim off fat when cool.

Eat as much of the broth and vegetables as you wish, and as often during the day as you care to. Drink as much water as you can conveniently take. Exercises about 2 hours, walking, swimming, or what you will.

Back numbers of the 12-Day Diet for Skin Beauty may be obtained by sending a 3 cent stamp for each day required to the Circulation Dept., Boston American.

Smart Linens on Society Autoists

Anybody will admit it is much fun on a blistering hot day to look critically at fashions, over leafy salads, with cool iced juices on hand. Smart society accommodates us by flocking to a new sidewalk cafe in New York.

We came away one day with pleasant memories. Cotton-clad women there had just motored in from the country, and the season and their tan progresses, their fresh-looking handkerchief linens, dimities, percales and dotted swissses will grow more and more becoming. City folk were dressing like country cousins, in ginghams, too, as well as in sheers, tweedy linens and gay tie silks.

Under many white linen, pique and shantung coats were simple dark sleeveless frocks, dressed up with clear white accessories.

Smartest of all was a certain linen suit, a treat for envious eyes. The coat and skirt was a dusty, sun-drenched blue—a heavenly color next to the faded rose high cut blouse spotted in old-fashioned calico pattern. On it were two sets of white buttons, double-breasted fashion. Topping the linen costume (sketched in the foreground) was a panama relying on deft moulding for its success. A good panama always looks the part!

At the table behind was a very young girl in a lively patterned gingham blouse that looked as if it had just been lifted out of grandmother's trunk. Likewise the shallow gingham sailor, very 1900.

And of course there was the ubiquitous crepe print, of cool white, navy and blue-printed. For little luncheons and the races, it is perfect! The large cartwheel hat is a current trend the lady in the sketch charmingly personifies.

Undoubtedly you have at least one white summer hat. That woman at one table wore her novelty straw sharply turned up in back where a high bow perched. This particular hat has a brand-new feeling.

Food Enters Diet Today for Beauty

ISN'T today's combination of beef, lamb and vegetables a succulent stew on which to feast and forget the strenuous liquid diet of the two preceding days? We can look back on those two days with not a little satisfaction, however, because they should have accomplished the preliminary purpose of clearing our bloodstream and eliminating poisonous wastes that may have accumulated.

There is no limit to the amount you may eat, and if you drink a great deal of water, as you should, there is not much possibility of over-eating in your zeal to make up for the other two days.

Exercise is almost as important as the diet from now on. Walk, swim, ride, dance, play tennis—do anything that you are accustomed to and enjoy, for there are no specialized exercises, unless you are already doing a daily dozen.

Good Manners

Gifts of Silver

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I'm in doubt as to the used of pewter for silver. It is to be a gift for an aunt who is to celebrate her Silver Wedding anniversary very soon. I've looked in all the local stores and cannot seem to find anything in silver, but there are many things in pewter that I could choose. Would this something in pewter be appropriate? F.

I don't believe, for this important Silver Wedding anniversary gift, that you should give pewter in lieu of silver. Unless, of course, you are sure that your aunt is especially enthusiastic about pewter. The pewter gift would be chaing for some other occasion. I am sure that, if you look more carefully, you will discover some lovely silver detail that will make your aunt very happy, and very proud of you for thinking of it.

16 Is Too Young for Him, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 16 years of age and in high school. For three or four years I have been very fond of a young man who is employed by my family. He is more than 10 years older than I am and is fine and intelligent. I really like him a lot my social standing, but in spite of this I grow more fond of him each day.

H. L. S.

Dear H. L. S.: As you realize yourself, 16 is entirely too young to consider a man seriously, especially one who is 10 years older, and very probably would not be acceptable to your family. In justice to yourself, I hope you will mingle with the boys and girls in your own high school set this summer. Go out with them and enjoy yourself.

STOCK MARKET UNDER WATCH

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 7 (INS)—An emergency investigation of the New York Stock Exchange will be held by the Senate banking and currency committee if bull speculators or bear raiders obstruct the normal recovery of commodity values, Senator Fletcher (D) of Florida, chairman, announced today.

A strict watch will be kept over market operations during the summer, Fletcher added. The "supervision" will be conducted by Ferdinand Pecora, special committee counsel.

"We are going to keep a check on all price movements on the New York Stock Exchange," said Fletcher. "We will watch for all illegitimate transactions.

"If Pecora finds any illegitimate transactions, he will notify me and I will call an immediate meeting of our committee to hold an inquiry. We can get a public investigation 48 hours after Pecora feels it necessary."

Fletcher said the market would be watched not only to check on unjustified inflation movements, which might lead to subsequent collapse, but upon all bear raids. Rumors have prevailed in Washington for several days that a group of bears planned an early raid on present values.

The Senate banking inquiry meanwhile stood in recess until Oct. 3—unless an emergency session is ordered.

WALSH TO FIGHT FOR HOSPITAL

Senator David I. Walsh announced today that he will renew his battle for the re-opening of Chelsea Naval Hospital in Washington on Monday. He will demand that it be made a general hospital for the treatment of all veterans who have sustained disabilities while in the service.

The fight for the re-opening of the hospital will be only one of his efforts in the capital in behalf of the veterans, he said, indicating that he would ask the Veterans' Bureau to permit outpatient treatment of ex-soldiers, only partly disabled, in their home towns so that they would not jeopardize their jobs, and that men whose allowance were discontinued be given a chance to prove that their disabilities are of service origin.

In this connection, the senator took occasion to defend his record on veterans' legislation. He said that he voted for the National Economy Act only because of the Bank Holiday.

While in Washington, Senator Walsh will also attempt to induce the Navy Department to increase the amount of work to be done in the Navy Yard here.

Wine Group Seeks Way for Business

London, July 7 (AP)—The organization of a campaign against prohibition "from the points of view of science, public health and nutrition," was recommended today by the wine sub-committee of the world economic conference to its parent sub-commission on the coordination of production and marketing.

The sub-committee seeks to encourage wine consumption throughout the world.

Takes Sailorman for Third Husband

San Francisco, July 7 (US)—The former Mrs. Archibald M. Johnson, recently divorced in Reno from the son of U. S. Sen. Hiram W. Johnson, has married again, her third time, and is now honeymooning on the east coast according to word received here. She was married last Sunday, at the home of friends in Chicago, to Commander Howard A. Flanigan, U. S. N.

Business in Canada Shows Slight Gain

Washington, July 7—An upward swing in Canadian trade and employment last week was noted in a report to the United States Department of Commerce from its commercial attache at Ottawa, Lynn W. Meekins.

Employment on June 1, he reported, gained 5 per cent over May 1, about double for the same period in 1931 and 1932.

"I Think It Closes the Book"

Pretty Marion "Kiki" Roberts, former Roxbury girl and sweetheart of Jack "Legs" Diamond, slain gangster, claims she lost show job because of "notoriety" after Mrs. Alice Diamond was slain, insists she knows nothing that could clear the murder mystery. "I think it closes the book," was all she said. All that pretty "Kiki" wants now is for the world to forget the days she and Jack Diamond spent together. As for Alice Diamond, "Kiki" saw her only once, she says. (International News Photos.)

ANTI-TRUST LAW TO BE INVOKED

Washington, July 7 (AP)—In the administration's attempt to make industries agree on means of spreading work and raising pay, those tardy were warned in forthright fashion today by Atty.-Gen. Cummings, that they may have to fight anti-trust suits.

"Industrial and other groups must abide by the terms and conditions of the anti-trust laws, unless and until they obtain actual exemption from certain of the requirements thereof by formulating a code under the National Recovery Act and obtaining its approval by the President," Cummings said.

Unless other industries quickly follow the cotton textile trade, whose code of fair competition is about ready for presidential approval, the Chief Executive may decide to promulgate some himself, for he has that right under the law, it was pointed out.

Cummings already is studying the Aluminum Company of America and steel rail concerns to see whether they have an international monopoly. He saw an "inevitable conclusion" that these two have fixed prices.

Legislature Plans Recovery Measure

A ways and means sub-committee confers with Gov. Ely today regarding the kind of measure to be enacted to enable the state to avail itself of the expenditure of federal and state money in connection with the national recovery act.

The ways and means committee is considering the proposal of the governor in a special message in which he recommended the state borrow not more than $30,000,000 to be used in connection with federal funds for public works.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH, 15 HURT IN FIRE

THIS IS LIFE

Uncle Sam May Have Lost Face in Parley; Still Has Shirt

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

THE MOST SENSIBLE COMMENT I have so far seen on the London Economic Conference which, at this writing, seems to be writhing feebly, although it has averted its death rattle, is one by Andre Maurois, the French writer, author of notable biographies of Shelley and Disraeli and now engaged upon the life of Edward VII of England.

What he has to say is characteristically French and, therefore, worth listening to at the moment. The French, of course, are acting and talking as if we are poison to them. And vice-versa. That is probably because the French know exactly what they want, make no bones about it, are thoroughly and intelligently nationalistic, and will co-operate in no co-operations that seem likely to endanger their financial or political security.

It surprises them enormously to find President Roosevelt doing exactly the same thing, albeit in a ruder and blunter manner, and they are therefore inclined to squawk. M. Maurois has too many friends on this side of the Atlantic to make any grave blunders of the sort. But speaking impersonally the other day, he did express some ideas that are worth considering

For Old Secret Diplomacy

He believes that the Conference should adjourn while there are still some tattered fragments of international amity left. It should adjourn before we all come to an open break. As to why the Conference failed, M. Maurois has some definite ideas, ideas which go hard against our most popular American opinion in international matters.

He believes that we should get back to the old secret diplomacy. He would drop Woodrow Wilson's idea of "open covenants openly arrived at." He implies that it is these open covenants that are making all the trouble. He believes that modern diplomacy is too open and blunt. The old-time diplomatist's secret search for the proper and gentle phrase may seem ridiculous to a generation that has no training in good manners and politeness, which is only another name for diplomacy, but at least it avoided the daily alarm, the daily explosion of resentment and anxiety, which seems to be the inevitable accompaniment of our present highly publicized method

The older diplomacy kept all its disagreements in camera, without the world press and its commentators kibitzing every move of the chess men. Nothing was announced until there was an accomplished fact to deal with. Then the peoples concerned could congratulate themselves over what they had secured, happily ignorant of all they had lost. And the responsible parties could act on their own responsibility, without being constantly under fire from a barrage of ignorant or interested or inspired press comment, the mobilized "experts" of all sorts who, without taking any responsibility, felt free to tell those who were responsible what they ought to do.

Dubious of Stabilized World

Futhermore, speaking as a realistic Frenchman, M. Maurois is somewhat skeptical about a planned economy and a stabilized world. Possibly some of the plans may come true, but much of them will not. There will be other depressions and other booms. About all that may be hoped from a planned economy is that the curves may be kept from rising so high and sinking so low as in the past. Absolute stability is probably not possible, and if it were possible it wouldn't be very human. If all values are to be the same, how dull life would be!

There speaks the Frenchman, the realist rather than the idealist. Or, if you prefer, the pragmatic idealist, who is very dubious of Utopian blueprints.

What he says about secret diplomacy, however, is interesting. American public opinion is committed, I suppose, to the theory that it was secret diplomacy that brought about the Great War and it is secret diplomacy, persisting into a newer and presumably better era, which has prevented the open internationalists from having their righteous way. One wonders and one doubts.

Almost any man of affairs believes that business runs better when it is in the hands of a few men who keep their own counsel. A business in which the workers were constantly kibitzing on the headquarter's staff and offering their advice and comment—even if the workers had no actual power—would follow a hesitant and uncertain course.

Similarly the quick and noisy repercussion of world opinion as every move in the international game is announced cannot but be embarrassing to the responsible negotiators. It has been bad enough to know that the American delegation was pretty badly at odds in its ideas, lacking a program and unable to agree on a program. But it has been worse to see the way the Conference has see-sawed up and down every time an American delegate—quite on his own hook—made a statement of policy, or contradicted a colleague, or retracted one of his own dicta, or was rebuked from Washington, all to the accompaniment of copious and contradictory comment by experts, journalists, and visiting firemen.

But We've Still Got Our Shirts!

There has been no doubt where the French stood. Therefore their insistence that they must know where everybody else is standing is not, under the circumstances unfair. Our objection to secret diplomacy is probably due to the conviction that in secret conference we are not expert enough to play the game successfully. If we came out of conference minus our shirts we should feel humiliated.

But I do not know whether that would be any more humiliating and disconcerting and comic than the spectacle we have presented in open meeting during the past two weeks. We may not have lost our shirts, but we seem to have given the impression that we were voluntarily discarding all our diplomatic clothing, suit after suit, vest upon vest upon vest, pantaloons by the dozen, like the red-haired circus clown on the white horse. It was a spectacle full of surprises and laughter, exhibited openly in the tent of all nations, and at the end we came out unexpectantly successfully, in pink tights and trunks, balancing gracefully and securely on the old American horse, "Higher Home Prices," to the chagrin of the French who wanted much to see us fall in the sawdust.

But it was not, I maintain, a really dignified procedure. Uncle Sam in his celebrated role of Poodles Hannaford is very good fun, but continental Europe, like Queen Victoria, was not amused. The result has been a tremendously expensive and nerve-racking way of getting nothing done. In secret conference we might have persuaded the French to back down. In the circus arena they couldn't afford to. For the French, like the Chinese, think a good deal of "face." We do not. And so we have lost face.

CHURCH THRONGED

Russell N. Boardman, Boston ace flier, who won world renown by flying from New York to Istanbul, Turkey, with John L. Polando, was fatally injured last Saturday at Indianapolis while competing in a coast-to-coast air race.

More than 500 relatives and friends crowded the tiny white Congregational church for the funeral services and then marched to the burial ground, a "stone's throw" away

Meanwhile, three planes of the Massachusetts National Guard and three ships of the Army, both groups from Boston Airport, flew around and around, awaiting a signal

Major Clarence E. Hodge, commanding officer of the Guard, led the first three ships. The other two were flown by Lieut. Clyde Jakway and Lieut. Charles Emerson. The writer was in the latter plane

Capt. Joseph A. Wilson led the Army planes, accompanied by Capt. Glenn Salisbury and Lieut. Malcolm Stewart.

PLANES CIRCLE

"Russ" Boardman was born in Westfield, Conn., and many times as a boy attended the church from which he was buried.

His wife, the former Ruth Boardman, his brother Earl, his two sisters and his "pals" were there mourning his passing. His flying partner to Turkey, Johnnie Polando, didn't fly over the church and cemetery, he wanted to be nearer his friend. He attended the services with his wife and John Heiser of Boston

Meanwhile, 3,000 feet overhead, six planes circled and circled, awaiting the funeral cortege. Finally it started for the cemetery. A large white panel was spread in the cemetery, our signal to dive when the body was being lowered into the grave. An hour went by. Finally the panel was removed, and Major Hodge pointed down. Motors throttled, we began the descent.

FAREWELL FROM AIR

A hundred feet above the open grave, the three motors were opened wide, and the flying men had said "goodbye" to their flying friend,

Not a hundred ships in the air; not a splurge for "Russ," just six planes, droning their song of Hail and Farewell.

Russ Boardman went home yesterday like a flying man should with the throb of airplane engines echoing and re-echoing in the grave which was filled too soon.

Opium and Liquor Seized on Liner

Customs officers today are holding 30 bottles of liquor and a small quantity of opium seized aboard the Blue Funnel liner Rhexenor, as she discharged cargo at the East Boston pier of the Boston and Albany yesterday.

Immigration officials refused to allow 25 Chinese, en route to the West Indies, to come ashore.

Burning Home Collapses -:- One Dead, 15 Injured

LYNN FIRE VICTIM

William Sexton of Ladder 2, who fell from roof with other firemen as building in which they were fighting blaze that cost life of woman collapsed. Fourteen others were injured, five of them in attempt to rescue the woman who burned to death. Sexton was photographed in his bed at home.

RUINS OF BUILDING IN LYNN COLLAPSE

Several families fled neighboring buildings threatened by general alarm fire in tenement and business block at North Federal and Boston sts., Lynn, where woman was burned to death and 15 firemen, five of them attempting to rescue her, were injured as the structure collapsed. Three nearby houses were damaged by spreading flames. Several firemen are under treatment in Lynn Hospital. Others were taken home after treatment at the scene of the fire. Firemen from Nahant, Revere, Saugus and Swampscott aided Lynn in the battle. (Boston American photos.)

HOUSE FALLS APART, BURYING LYNN FIREMEN

Victims Trapped on Top Floor; Many Families in Peril

An elderly woman was [illegible] death, 15 firemen were [illegible] several families were forced [illegible] fire from nearby homes [illegible] a general alarm fire destroyed a combined tenement and business block at North Federal and Boston sts., Lynn early today

The victim of the blaze was Mrs. Mary Blair, 60, who was trapped in the upper floor of the building as flames turned the structure into a roaring furnace

Three firemen, attempting to go to her aid from a first-floor roof were injured when the roof collapsed. Two others were buried in the debris. All were rescued by their mates

LEAPS FROM WINDOW

Fred Blair 28, leaped from a second-story window to escape the flames. He is being treated at Lynn Hospital for serious burns of the face and shoulders. Firemen rescued Miss Rose Blair, 19; Mrs. Louise Barrow, 40, and her daughter Mary, 12, from the flaming building

Patrick I. King, a fireman off duty, rushed from his home next door to the burning building and aided in the rescue work. He was later forced to return to his home and bring his own family out to safety. Six other families in nearby dwellings fled from their homes as fire threatened them.

Three of the neighboring houses were damaged by flames but firemen extinguished the blazes there before they could make any headway. The burned building was a total loss. Damage was estimated altogether by police and fire officials at nearly $15,000.

8 UNDER TREATMENT

Under treatment at Lynn Hospital for injuries sustained in the blaze are Lieut. Henry Hayden, who suffered fractured fingers in the roof collapse; William J. Corbett, who suffered burns and bruises when he fell through a ladder into the debris; Eric Johnson, who suffered burns and bruises when buried in the debris; Capt. Frank Goodrich, sprained back; Harold Johnson, sprained back, and Joseph Cavanaugh, sprained back and possible fracture of the leg.

James J. O'Brien and William Keaton, who fell from the roof with Lieut. Hayden, both escaped with only slight injuries in the collapse.

The second alarm was sounded a few minutes after firemen reached the scene and the general alarm was ordered several minutes later. This brought apparatus from Nahant, Revere, Saugus and Swampscott to aid the Lynn department in fighting the fire.

YD OFF TO CAMP SATURDAY

The annual tour of duty of the 26th Division, M. N. G., begins tomorrow with approximately 6500 officers and enlisted men leaving their various armories by train, bus, truck and auto for Fort Devens

No money has as yet been received from Washington with which to finance the encampment, but national guard officials state they have assurances the money will be forthcoming. It is expected the cost of the camp will be considerably less this year in line with the general economy program

A feature of this year's tour of duty will be the appearance of motorized artillery units in place of the horse drawn artillery of past years. Gen. Daniel Needham, commissioner of public safety, is in charge of the artillery units

BREWERY SUES OVER NAME

Successful in one court fight to enjoin a rival company from using its barrels, Haffenreffer & Co., Jamaica Plain brewers, has filed suit in federal court to enjoin a Brooklyn, N. Y., brewery from using the trademark "King" on its beer.

With the papers in the case was deposited a bottle of 3.2 beer labeled "King's" as an exhibit

Theodore C. Haffenreffer charges that the trademark "King's" belongs to his concern through purchase from Charles A. King, who did business in Boston prior to 1891

The suit is against William, Edward and David Zakon, doing business under the firm name of William Zakon & Sons

'Secret Fifty' Get Aid of Congress Leaders

City Councillor John F. Dowd, of Roxbury, sponsor of a meeting of 50 of the leaders at Hotel Statler tonight to choose a mayoralty candidate, took another shot at the Democratic city committee today with announcement that two congressmen and five Suffolk department heads would be present

The meeting, announced by Councillor Dowd in a sizzling blast against the Democratic city committee, has been called for the purpose of securing a united support of a candidate to oppose former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols in the coming mayoralty contest

CONGRESSMEN IN LINE

The newest acquisitions to the list of those who will be present at the meeting of state representatives and city councillors, all Democrats, were announced today by Dowd as Congressmen John W. McCormack, of Dorchester, and John J. Douglass, of East Boston

In addition to these representatives of the national government Dowd declares the following Democratic leaders will join the meeting: Sheriff John A. Kelliher, Register of Deeds William T. A. Fitzgerald, Register of Probate Arthur D. Sullivan, Clerk Francis A. Campbell, of the Superior Civil Court and Clerk William A. Prendible, of the Superior Criminal Court

In connection with the meeting tonight, Councillor Dowd today received a letter from Councillor Francis E. Kelly, of Dorchester, who will be unable to be present because of a recent illness. Councillor Kelly's letter urges that the meeting choose a candidate who will make a logical appeal to the voters of the city

"The public will refuse to accept, as their candidate, a professional, old-time politician," the letter states, "who has been in politics for the past 20 to 35 years. They want a New Deal with new men at the helm."

He continued that the man selected by the group should be an office-holder, who in the past four years of depression has faithfully represented the interests of the city. He then called attention to his record in the City Council as proof that he would work for the best interests of the overburdened taxpayer and the unemployed

The meeting is scheduled to start at 8 p. m., and both public and newspapermen will be excluded. Dowd stated, however, that formal announcement of the action of the meeting would be made at 11 p. m. He said the meeting will be of a preliminary nature

While Dowd was working on his plans for the gathering, friends of former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath were bringing pressure to bear on some of his associates with a view to securing the endorsement of the Dowd group for their candidates

Meanwhile Chairman John W. Newman, of the Democratic City Committee, is maintaining a strict silence on the Dowd blast. He has declined to make any answer to Dowd's demand that his organization make no further effort to chose a Democratic standard bearer

Expert Says Cool; Bulb Boiling Up

The weatherman may be right but if he is, the thermometer is wrong.

At 10 a. m. the temperature was 85, 11 degrees hotter than yesterday at the same time. But the weatherman says it's going to get cooler

The hottest July 7 was in 1883 when it was 96, and unless the weatherman and the thermometer get together and agree on whether it will b hotter or cooler, that record is likely to be erased

Baby Carriage Stolen

A baby carriage was stolen off the porch at the home of Mrs. Agnes Howe, 287 K st., South Boston

WIND SHIFT TO BANISH HEAT

There will be at least another day of summer before it cools off tonight the weatherman today told a Boston that was glad enough to have yesterdays heat after the chill days that came earlier in the week

While the mercury climbed higher yesterday than it had on any other July 6 in the last 20 years, the forecaster did not promise any record performances today. Nor did he see a cloud or the prospect of a cloud in the sky to mar a perfect summer day

The thermometer registered 91 yesterday but it is expected to go a bit under that reading today. And tonight it will be definitely cooler but still fair, according to the weatherman

Economy in Street Lighting Is Scored

Representatives of various civic organizations plan to hold a special meeting some time next week to take action against the city policy in eliminating certain street lights as an economy measure

Plans for the conference were launched at a meeting of the executive committee of the United Improvement Association at the City Club

Waltham Crossing to Be Eliminated

Mayor Patrick J. Duane of Waltham has been informed the elimination of the grade crossing over the B. & M. railroad tracks at Beaver Brook, in Main st., that city, is included as one of the projects under the national recovery act.

Boston Officers Seek Chief's Berth

Stoneham police may have a bit of competition in the race for head of the police department because the board of selectmen has received letters of application, two from Boston police officers who would like the job. The selectmen say that both applicants are at present active members of the Boston force but it declines to disclose the names of the men. The chief of the department has the rank of captain. The appointment will be to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. M. Sumner Greene

Scanlon to Lead O'Connell Drive

The first meeting of the younger men's O'Connell-for-mayor club got under way last night at the home of the former Congressman with 75 men representing each ward in the city present.

Neil T. Scanlon, Democratic leader of Ward 4, was chosen chairman of the meeting and will direct the campaign

Boston's Pride MAKES MEN'S HEARTS TUMBLE

Burlesque of All Cycle Films Planned in Picture; Hoot's Air Races Worry Sally

By LOUELL O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 7—Th movies haven't made fun of themselves since "Once in a lifetime." Fox is going to poke a little fun at all the pictures that have been made and in a different way. "I Came Frm Hell," which will star that Swedish matador El Brendel, is a comedy with a most peculiar setup.

Listen wh- I explain it to you! It's a burlesque of all cycle pictures such as fugitive, gangster pictures, mystery, western, college, musical and romantic pictures. The comedy story is about a fugitive from justice who, in order to get away from the police, joins a theatrical company that is making a picture of a prison escape. Then the fugitive gets into real trouble and the police, thinking it is all a part of the picture, refuse to help him.

Louella O. Parsons

Van Dyke's Task

Trying to make Warner Baxter and Madge Evans go through their paces as a gentleman and lady in this very modern story, "Penthouse," is a new departure for W. S. Van Dyke. Van Dyke is so used to tussling with lions or getting Eskimos to play a heavy scene that any story as thoroughly Park avenuish as Arthur Somers Roche's "Penthouse" is a Cosmopolitan serial, calls for drawing room technique. Warner Baxter has been borrowed from Fox for this epic, which is Bill Van Dyke's first in effete surroundings.

Gray's Good Voice

If Charles Rogers will just let Lawrence Gray sing one little song in "Golden Harvest" he will be surprised what it will do for his picture. Young Gray has been around town ever since he left the Ed Wynn company, unable to get a job. Sometimes producers are mighty blind. Now he has been signed for one of the three leading roles in "Golden Harvest." Peggy Shannon Morris and Richard Arlen have the other two leads. Geneveve Tobin, and I have to repeat myself and say that girl has certainly enhanced her personality with a new haircut, has been signed as the leading lady. Others in the cast, Elizabeth Patterson, Berton Churchill and Guille Haydon Ralph Murphy and a technical director are just back from Chicago where they filmed scenes in the stock market during the wheat excitement.

Hoot Worries Sally

Sally Eilers, in the East, has expressed daily concern for her husband, Hoot Gibson, who was injured in the air races. Sally wired she would come direct to Hoot's bedside if necessary. He is well enough, however, to permit her to visit the World's Fair before she returns. You have never seen such courage as Hoot showed in your life. With two cracked vertebrae and bruised from head to foot, he laughed and joked while the X-rays were being taken. Wh nJuns Gals, who had gone to the races with Hoot and his mother, asked to be allowed to see him, Hoot, in agony said to the doctor, "please wash my face and fix me up a bit before you let any lady in to see me." If that isn't courage, then I don't know what is.

Chatter in Hollywood

Lola Lane has just had a great experience with her World a Fair pictures contract. She was told to bring her contract to Chicago and sign it for a short to be made with an independent company. When she arrived in Chicago she found Grant Withers also there waiting for Mel Brown, director. Mr. Brown, meanwhile had come back to Hollywood. You can imagine the surprise of Lola and Grant when they found they were supposed to pose before a dummy camera in a motion picture scene while the promoters charged admission to see how two Hollywood players emoted in a movie. Discouraged and disheartened, Lola hurried back to Hollywood but not before Lew Ayres, Lola's ex, met her in Chicago, had lunch with her, comforted her during this difficult time.

Mansion Rented

One of the show places in southern California is the house built by Colleen Moore and Johnny McCormick. Colleen, since her marriage to Al Scott, has lived there and enjoyed the gardens, tennis court and the beautiful home. She is renting it now to the David Selznicks and taking herself off to New York. "Al cant come here," she said, "so, I am going to visit him." The two pictured that the planned to make for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer didn't materialize and Colleen says she is tired waiting around, so she is going to take a vacation.

Snapshots of Hollywood

BOBBE ARNST, no longer carrying the torch for JOHNNY WEISSMULLER, having fun, she and NICK STUART stepped out at the Club Lido, no, AILEEN PRINGLE and MAIT MOORE interested spectators at the air races; MRS. RUPERT HUGHES munching a sandwich in between thrills; DR. A. H GIANNINI holding little VALDA WINCHELL in his lap; a cute trick, this youngster who never forgets her manners; MAE MARSH a quiet spectator with her husband, L. L. ARMS; MAE raving over how pretty MARY PICKFORD looked when she arrived on the field; MAJ. UDET taking some of the glory away from the film crowd; no one listened or looked at the stars while the intrepid German was doing his stuff; WINFIELD SHEEHAN wondering if UDET would be a bet in the movies; CAROLE LOMBARD and WILLIAM POWELL celebrating a wedding anniversary with the RICHARD BARTHELMESSES as their dinner guests; WILLIAM FLEISCHMAN buying lunch for SONDRA SHAW, HENRY KING just back from Texas where he bought a new plane, giving the races the once over. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

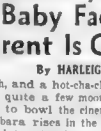
Barbara Stanwyck Scores Again in "Baby Face"; George Brent Is Co-Starred

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Ooh-la-lah, and a hot-cha-cha! In steps one of the sexiest photoplays in quite a few moons, and who but Barbara Stanwyck is here, to bowl the cinematic heroes over like a lot of tenpins. Barbara rises in the make-believe world by turning men's hearts into stepping-stones; but Nemesis gets here in the end when no less a sterling love-maker than George Brent bends her to his will of rushing off to the first person they can find.

* * *

No matter how hot the summer's day, the warmth engendered in the picture matches it, as you may judge for yourselves by seeing "Baby Face," featured on the new Paramount - Fenway bill. The companion picture is another first-run, "Gambling Ship," quite a nifty pal for Miss Stanwyck's seething, sizzling drama. For contrast, it mingles ro- mance with an overdose of racketeer activities; it novelty lies in the fact that most of the piratical doings take place on the high seas, with the tossing of bomba upon a whoopee ship, and the wrecking of a gambling craft on the rocks of the California coast.



Barbara Stanwyck

"Baby Face" has a theme along the lines of a cycle popular with the fans several years ago. Out of poverty's rags looms the feminine glories of Miss Stanwyck; she is going to be different from those ladies who are content merely to get their man—one man. She hooks them, one after the other; the flappers will be glad to hear that Donald Cook appears, parks and pets, but unhappily is shot into the discard.

As she lays affection low about her, much as grass falling before the lawn mower, the star steadily rises in the world; rags quickly give way to fine raiment, fura and real estate. Suddenly, the amiable Mr. Brent flashes upon the scene, things get lively, and the gay siren makes the count of 10, surrendering her odd career in favor of gingham and a humble roof as a poor man's bride.

Mamaelle Barbara, it must be said, is at her best, and that means she is mistress of her role all the way. In humor, in emotional passage, she is equally effective. Brent is fine, and many of the minor characters are superb.

* * *

"Gambling Ship" concerns the rivalry of a couple of night club ships moored off the Spanish coast. A bold, bad man in the person of our own Boston favorite, Cary Grant (formerly Archie Leach), "blows" in from the eastern gangland, and in his wake is trouble—shooting and other acts of violence. The melodrama has one very fine point—it has plenty of action

Roscoe Karns is the medal winner among the players, for he manages to make us laugh a great deal, even when the gangsters are most villainous. Mr. Grant is too much the leading man to be convincing as a chief of crooks; Arthur Vinton is a good deal more realistic as his pal in vice. Our old friend, Edwin Maxwell, appears once as a federal district attorney, he being one of the most versatile of Hollywood's character men. Glenda Farrell weaves in and out, and Benita Hume, truly a grand actress, is out of her element as the sweetheart of two of these underworld chaps.

Screwy action and Mr. Karns' comedy are the best points

The audience, filling every seat when we reviewed the show yesterday, apparently liked both films, especially Miss Barbara's.

Marion Davies Took Brogue Lessons

By HARRIS MORGAN

Sure, and it was Hughey O'Byrne, old hotel doorman, who gave Marion Davies the lilt of her Irish brogue for "Peg O' My Heart." Marion's rippling brogue in the part she plays in her new starring vehicle, now being shown at Greater Boston theaters, surprised even her best friends. The natural charm of it captured the hearts of all the hardboiled crew that worked on the production.

"Where did you get it?" was asked the vivacious star. Marion's eyes blinked roughishly.

"Sure, and it was brought over from the auld sod by Hughey O'Byrne himself!" she replied, lapsing for the moment into the dialect of the character she portrays.

Hughey O'Byrne, she explained, was doorman at the Ambassador Hotel, in Los Angeles for many years.

Marion Davies

"He always had such a nice way of greeting people as he opened the automobile doors," she continued. "He is quite a character and his fame has traveled all over the world through association with guests at the hotel. I always used to mimic his brogue. So when I was cast as Peg and realized I needed an Irish dialect, I immediately thought of old Hughey.

"I found he had a new job over in Pasadena at the Huntington Hotel and sent word for him to come and see me on his days off.

"After he'd leave I would get out my script and hurry through my lines, putting the words into Hughey's brogue, remembering as best I could how he'd twist things around and put the cart before the horse, so to speak, with his verbs and nouns.

"Before long I found I could shape the lines into brogue of my own. Once you get the swing of it the dialect flows along naturally. Maybe it's the Irish in me that helped. But if any credit is due it belongs to Hughey O'Byrne.

"Of course it is more difficult to play a role that demands a dialect since you have not only the dialect to remember but also the unfamiliar diction. However, it wasn't all hard work because we managed to inject lots of fun in it with everybody on the set talking in some sort of brogue between scenes."

SKATERS PICK OWN EVENTS

The half-mile races in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser roller skating derby at Boston Arena, Saturday afternoon, July 22 (finals) seem to be the favorite of the boys who have entered. Many of the boys have passed up the mile and the 100-yard dash in favor of the middle distance. In addition, several boys like the backward skating event.

On the other hand, the girls are going big for the costume parade on roller skates. With the assistance of their mother, a large number of them, especially younger girls, are working on costumes of their own designing in the hope of winning prizes. There will be no preliminaries in the costume events. Those who do not win a place in the race preliminaries at four Boston parks and playgrounds on Saturday afternoon, July 15, may enter the costume events anyway at the Arena on the 22d.

For the benefit of those not familiar with the places where preliminaries will be run off the list is printed again today. Charlesbank playground, West End, Paris st. playground, East Boston, Strandway, South Boston, near Columbus Park beach, and Franklin Park greeting, near Blue Hill avenue entrance to Franklin Park. Contestants should go to the one nearest home.

Great Eastern Bus Terminal Opened

Paul K. Wadsworth, president of the Great Eastern Stages, announces the opening of the new Boston terminal at 52 Hudson st., near Tremont, next to the Touraine Hotel. The Great Eastern bus system, which recently entered New England, is well known to the rest of the country. Great Eastern buses average nearly 1,000,000 miles a month and afford Bostonians new through service to New York, Washington, Richmond and other points south, as well as direct service to Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and other western points.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY By LOUIS SOBOL

For Better or For Worse!

Right out of my own head I have conceived the idea of dedicating a day to an oppressed strata of womanhood—the wives of the Broadway columnists. Sometimes, after holidays, I get brilliant inspirations like that. I mean we have a Mother's Day and a Father's Day, a Memorial Day and a Labor Day. Why not a Wives-of-Broadway-Columnists Day?

A phenomenon that puzzles most right-thinking people is that with scarcely an exception, the wives of Broadway columnists are wholesome, good-looking, mild-mannered, generous girls loyal to their husbands and devoted to their children. Occasionally, the public has a chance to view them close to as they sit quietly with their restless, brilliant writing halves at premieres, at night clubs or at speakeasies. They smile bravely. They listen patiently, almost reverently, it appears, when their husbands vouchsafe them an occasional word.

He must suffer this attention from brazen hussies to get news. She knows that, the wife does—because hasn't he told her a thousand times that it is these little girls of the show world who circulate around in the higher circles of Broadway and Park ave. and are invaluable sources of news tips which are the very life sinews of his profession.

So the understanding wife of the columnist keeps right on painfully understanding, even when night after night passes and the demands of his peculiar profession prevent him from taking her out as often as he'd like to—she understands that, too. He can't have her lagging around with him, wandering from place to place. People who have news tips to give him hesitate to come over when the wife's around. So she stays home, except on occasions as Eva said. He telephones to her about 7 or 8 o'clock each night. "What are you doing, honey?" The radio is on. "Lonesome?"—Yes, she's lonesome. "Gee, I wish I didn't have to run over to Pippy Pszooka's—hit I gotta. Sally Bigshins is in from the Coast and she's gonna be there and I want to get her alone. She's got a raft of dirt." Will he be home early? Certainly—3 a. m. at the latest. Take care of yourself, honey, be seeing you.

What takes place in the mind of a columnist's wife during those long hours she spends at home, night after night I don't know. Husband is circulating around. Somewhere between 6 and 7, the key fumbles in the lock, he enters with nosy quiet ness—opens the ice-box door and shuts it with a slam, he putters about in the bathroom with all faucets gushing boisterously and then he tumbles into bed—and she knows he's been having a few with the boys.

I sing to you then of a sacrificing, fine type of womanhood the wife of the columnist. A soft-hearted, tolerant woman who cringes inwardly every time her dyspeptic husband pours out his personal venom in a column, who fails to understand why the gentle, good-natured man she married has so completely changed since accident thrust him at the helm of a Broadway department who is the first to suffer from his insufferable egotism, his churlish callousness, his apparent indifference to the niceties and conventions—and who, in spite of that, clings loyally and uncomplainingly—and who goes on understanding—and understanding!

NEW HIGHS SET WITH TRADING VOVLUME BIG

New York, July 7—The stock market in Wall Street swept forward into new high ground for the year today in huge dealings, aided by a spectacular crash in the dollar as measured in terms of foreign exchange.

With sterling soaring around 37 cents to $4.13 and other foreign currencies up sharply, the dollar fell to a new low at 70 cents gold.

BIG BLOCKS APPEAR

Stocks were engulfed around in enormous volume with initial blocks running to 10.00 shares in General Motor. The tickers fell behind, unofficially, British sentiment was accounted by further bond sales reported in week-end trade reviews.

Heavy demand for rails utilities and industrials appeared soon after the opening.

British enthusiasm on the stock exchange seemed to reach a "new high" as trading progressed. Profit-taking sales caused temporary minor reactions at times, but traders were eager to buy on such setbacks. By the end of the first hour the tape was running 21 minutes late.

Advances of 1 to 4 or more points were shown in American Tobacco B, New York Central, Public Service, Water Works, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, Cerro De Pasco, Allied Chemical, Coca-Cola, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel.

Speculative enthusiasm carried curb stocks to sharply higher levels with large blocks changing hands on a scale up.

Decision of the world delegates to continue the Economic Conference at London was primarily interesting to Wall St. in its relation to other news. The British Dominions support of the American program, as enunciated by Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, coupled with Australia's insistence on home recovery has crystallized the belief that America's effort to raise prices might succeed.

PAPER VALUES SOAR

A cross-sectional cross-section of market activity in recent weeks shows that the aggregate market value of all listed shares on the New York Stock Exchange increased 11.9 per cent during June. In May the gain was 21.1 per cent.

Weekly report of the Federal Reserve System showed an increase in circulation of $77,000,000 attributed to first-of-the-month requirements as well as fourth of July demands. Brokers' loans rose $84,000,000, the largest single week's advance since the rise began last April. The total now stands at $1,540,000,000, the highest since October 29, 1931. Purchases of government securities totaled approximately $20,000,000.

The past week was marked by further sharp gains in many lines of industry and trade, said the Dun & Bradstreet review today.

"It is no longer an opinion," asserted the agency, "that business is on the upgrade; it is a fact. The complete reversal of trade trends during the first six months of the current year, with the precipitous and unprecedented climb of productive and distributive forces, has left even leaders of industry mystified."

Rail Obligations Dominate Bond Mart

New York, July 7—Activity and strength in rail obligations continued to dominate the bond market today.

Missouri Pacific 5s "I" featured the carrier group with a runup of 2¾ points (4); closely followed by the Florida East Coast 5s which gained 2 to 18; Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 65; Northwestern Ry. refunding 5s up 1¾, at 82½; Nickel-plate 5s up 1 at 56; New York Central 3½s at 75, and Southern Pacific 4½s of '69 up 1¾ at 66¾. U. S. Governments were firm.

Bohn Aluminum's Earnings Larger

Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corp. for quarter ended June 30, 1933, will show a net profit in excess of $300,000 after depreciation, taxes, etc., or over $1.40 a share on the 382,418 shares. In the first quarter this year net profit was $106,602, or 28 cents a share. Net profit for the first six months this year will exceed $400,000, or over $1.70 a share on the stock, against net loss of $73,964 in the first six months of 1932.

Market Views of Brokers in Boston

Paine, Webber & Co.—Regard the utilities as among the most attractive trading purchases at this time. Mickelson, Canadian Pacific appears behind the rest of the rails. The same can be said of pure oil among stocks in the oil industry.

Hornblower & Weeks—It is not a question as much as to whether the market has made a tem porary top, as to how much destruction to further advance will be witnessed when the leading industrials approach their previous highs.

Lee, Higginson & Co.—The market still seems to be primarily under the influence of inflation psychology and until something happens to change this psychology there seems to be little reason to expect other than technical reactions in a bull market.

PATRICIA FLUSHED

"A penny for your thoughts," said Haverhill, as they slid out to the floor.

"A penny is not nearly enough" "Are you worrying about what you owe me?"

"Worry is a mild way of putting it, confessed Patricia, feeling more than that matters were on a lighter basis. Dorothy's absence helped. After all, the sun was bright, the sky was blue she was bowling along in a smart car. The heavens had not fallen. She glanced at the tall gray-haired man beneath the wheel and said frankly, "A hundred and twenty-seven dollars is a lot of money to me. Naturally, I'm worrying."

"You may stop immediately." "I'm afraid I can't," Patricia told him loyally. "Within three weeks I shall pay you every ...

I wasn't going to suggest tearing up the I. O. U. ... he returned. "Was that what you thought?" he inquired, enjoying her confusion ...

I shall keep your I. O. U. ... you redeem it ... for two reasons. For one, I'm quite sure not a welcher and for another I'm not in the habit of doubting for Santa Claus. I have no intention of changing my habits even when so charming a young lady as yourself is involved ...

"Then I shall go right on worrying," Patricia put in drily.

"But you needn't." The man paused, continued, "You know, today that you didn't have the money with you. Have you got it any place else?"

"No," said the girl low.

"That's my problem Mr. Haverhill ...

"If the Beaucarme" he has ... added ...

And what if I do?" That's my concern, too."

Do you really like playing with the tin-horn sports, the quarter-and-a-penny gamblers, the hangers-on and the never-will-dies. Why, Patricia, tell me why?"

... He ... Isn't it per ... good ...

Why not let me take you in hand? I'll show you how to earn a hundred and twenty-seven dollars in less than twenty minutes. I'm willing to overlook your rotten performance this afternoon. I still think I can make you into a real card player."

"You're very kind," said Patricia ...

I have my moments of generosity," acceded Haverhill simply ... genuinely missing the point. "I'd like to teach you bridge that is bridge. You needn't be grateful to me more than willing."

"Oh, are you?" said Patricia mildly. "And what about me? Suppose I'm not willing?"

"It's a free country," remarked Haverhill and let the matter drop ... and ... disturbed ... and ... a curious feeling ... down and ... The ... Would he ... again? ... Apparently he would ... for when he ... Patricia ... Patricia ... He ... was far and tame.

Do you remember the last time you asked me to work for you?" she said presently, reopening the subject. "Do you remember what happened?" At his nod she swallowed, ... "If I did take a job with you, would you promise never to let anything like that happen again?"

He ... "I ...

Delegates in With Dead

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The Geological Museum was a perfect place for a stone fight.

It garages samples of every boulder that was ever hurled by nature on man. Including the now famous Roosevelt meteorite which fell through the roof last Monday ...

It just about scattered the conference. Now, our War Department will have a tough time explaining who built the catapult on the gun deck of the Amberjack ...

If the diplomats are finally down to museums, how about the Smithsonian Institution? That hasn't had a good, live exhibit in some time ...

After that, we can book them for Ripley's believe it or not show at the Century of Progress. And let 'em wind up in bottles in John Hopkins University ...

Maine Brunette in Chorus of Nation's Most Beautiful Girls

A girl from New England, Portland, Me., to be exact, has been elected as one of the 18 most beautiful chorus girls in America. She is Bee Stevens, whose picture is printed today for readers of the Boston American to judge in the Beauty Judging Contest.

Is Miss Stevens your idea of a beautiful girl? If she is can you write in 100 words or less your reason? Remember the one best definitions of feminine beauty each will win a free trip to the World's Fair in Chicago. The next hour 50 definitions each will win a free trip to "Gold Diggers of 1933" now showing at the Majestic Theater.

Just to help you pass judgment on Miss Stevens we've got a little information about her. She has a black hair and brown eyes. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 117 pounds.

The trips to Chicago will be arranged for the winners by the Bauer Travel Service, 142 Tremont St., Boston. They will be identical of the trips which the Bauer Travel Service already has arranged for hundreds of New Englanders.

Now read the contest rules carefully, and then begin to plan on a trip to the Century of Progress Exhibition ...

Here's Bee Stevens of Portland, Me., who is in the chorus of "Gold Diggers of 1933." Her picture is the ninth for you to judge in the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser's Beauty Judging Contest.

Harvard Bends Away From the Haughton Influence ↑↓ Oxford-Cambridge And Harvard-Yale New Sport Symbol

—BY AUSTEN LAKE—

As one who harks back to the day when the late Percy Haughton roused the welkin in the training quarters of the Harvard football squads and taught his pupils that all opponents were disciples of mammon and mischief, I am puzzled by the goings on at the Stadium these afternoons, where the boys from Oxford and Cambridge are sharing the training facilities with the boys from Harvard and Yale amid a carnival of well wishing and beautiful camaraderie.

For, if the present plan of fraternization on the eve of battle is right, then Haughton's method of whipping his men to a spiritual froth must have been wrong. Though when I suggest this, I am hoping that Tacks Hardwick, Eddie Casey, Swede Nelson and other Boston apostles of the Haughton cult, who genuflect upon the master's name is mentioned will allow for my simple mind in case I choose the wrong back-streets during the next few days.

But to one who used to goggle at Haughton's hairy-chested troglodytes as they burst from the old locker building at Soldiers Field, so that often the double doors jumped their hinges, and go roaring down to the Stadium with a moan of hate for the heathen they were about to Christianize, I am bewildered at the old-chappying and jolly-weathering that is being exchanged between the Harvard athletes and their Saturday opponents. Of course, I realize that this is track and that was football, but the underlying principles of Haughton's day were the same for all competitive sports.

When Haughton Coached Harvard's Baseball Team

I recall once that he took over coaching the baseball team in the spring of 1915, after Dr. Frank J. Sexton had resigned in a tiff with the Advisory Committee. Although he knew very little about the game, he applied the principle, "Love duty and hate your rival," and by making his players chase loose baseballs with the same high frenzy that his football men had pursued fumbles, he worked them into such a creamy lather that they subsequently won 19 of 22 ball games and beat Holy Cross, Princeton, Columbia and Yale twice each.

His theory was simple. "As the spirit, so goes the body," he would say, while grinding down his back molars and exhorting his men with scriptural quotations to "Hit 'em fair and knock 'em far."

I do not mean to let down my hair because Harvard youth no longer beat their heads against the steam pipes in a transport after listening to a coach's pre-battle eloquence. I know that there are still many coaches who feed their men emotional shots before loosing them on the enemy. But I suspect that the times and the material are changing, and college athletics is resolving into a social exchange for the sake of the educational mark it leaves.

And so when Mr. Evan Hunter, who is a plump, middle-aged gentleman of the English ruling class and who bears the title of Honorable (meaning that he is not paid) Secretary of the Oxford team, postures in a spread eagle and holds his sawed-off shotgun behind the hams of an assorted lot of Harvard, Yale, Oxford and Cambridge sprinters, I cannot believe that it is tarnishing the intercollegiate spirit.

Or when Arthur Foote, II, Harvard '33, says to Jack Lovelace of Exeter College, Oxford, "Come along old man, and I will pace you a furlong or two," there seems to be something refreshing in the sight of two brown-skinned, morning-faced youngsters trimming around the cinders. But I suspect that Haughton, who never compromised with his principles, would utter a fervent "Koosh" if he were there and, perhaps, pinch his nostrils between thumb and forefinger, a curious habit that he had when displeased.

The Old College Sport's Order Is Changing

I am thinking now how we used to chase the visiting hordes of Lehigh students over the face of College Hill, Easton, Pa., after Lafayette had lost an athletic event before the war, feeling a pious exhalation as we loosed boulders on their heels. At the top of the slope there stands a Civil War soldier in stone who has lost the tip of his bayonet, which according to tradition, he lost during a rock battle between the studentry of the two colleges.

One historian testifies that the bayonet was, in reality, cracked off during an especially frigid spell in the winter of 1895, but the undergraduates rejected the story as detrimental to the interest of college ardor, and incoming freshmen were carefully instructed in the true story of the bayonet, so that they would come away from the statue with their souls in their eyes and a hatred for Lehigh born in their hearts. Yet, from what I hear, late generations of Lafayette men are neglecting their traditions and Lehigh men now retire down the incline without any pressure on their sterns.

It comes hard to us veterans who cling to the glories of campus riots and cow-in-the-belfry days, to accept the symbol that the Oxford-Cambridge, Harvard-Yale meet represents. I suspect that the day is not very far distant when opposing football squads will set down at a common training table on the eve of conquest. In fact little Tufts and Mass. State, whose rivalry is a scale model of Yale's and Harvard's for intensity, did just that several November's ago.

Except that the Englishmen, during these Stadium training sessions, say "shednie" and "incredible" when they mean "schedule" and "geez," I find it hard to tell them from the Harvard and Yale youths. They seem to be fusing comfortably, even digging each other's starting holes and crouching for the sprints with a by-your-leave gesture. Nor does Mr. Evan Hunter seem to resent the pleasure he causes the onlookers when he unships his heavy starting artillery, which he assures me is based on common sense and spraddles out for his big moment like a navy signalman. It is quite natural that the Englishmen who are chaperoning the two teams (they have no coaches) should dominate the scene. I am told that the Americans cut quite as singular a figure when they go to London every four years.

One thing about this coming meet there is that would appease the late Percy Haughton. And that concerns the fact that only first places in each of the 12 events counts. Second and thirds are plain duds. For, in his numerology there were no digits after No. 1 for Haughton.

"If you cannot win, just drop down the nearest manhole," he once advised in an address before a young men's supper club, "there is nothing behind first place."

H-Y FORCES IN STIFF BATTLE

The running and jumping of the English team is earning considerable praise.

The British university men continue to improve and now are practically on a par with the Harvard-Yale athletes.

The English middle-distance men are proving wonders. Holdwell, Loveless and Mashe. Eastwood, the former London ace, is the burden of a letter. Edward L. Davis sprinter, is one of the fastest little fellows ever to run on the Stadium.

The times of the Englishmen in all events, except the half mile and two miles, are slower than the Americans. But English tracks are not so fast as the up-to-date American speedways.

Davis, however, has been timed to 10 flat for the 100, equaling Calvin's best mark in competition.

HAGEN'S WILD ROUND COSTS HIM OPEN LEAD

DISMAL 79 ENDS VET'S REIGN; THREE TIE

By LAURENCE MEIER

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 7 (INS)—Two Americans, Joe Kirkwood and Leo Diegel and two Englishmen, Henry Cotton and Abe Mitchell, suddenly were plunged headlong into a fight at the close of a sensational third round in the [illegible] golf champion [illegible] as overnight leaders tottered and fell and victory became almost any man's for the asking. The four men were tied at 216 with only 18 holes to play this afternoon.

Notable among the victims was Walter Hagen, four times champion and seeking his fifth title, with more than an even chance of getting it as the second started. But as [illegible] Hagen had a 3-42 [illegible] three strokes [illegible] and [illegible] he went [illegible]

At the [illegible] fateful [illegible] afternoon, the standing of the leaders read like this:

Diegel, America; Kirkwood America, Mosey [illegible] Cotton, England, also; Leo Diegel and Craig Wood, America, 217; Gene Sarazen, America and A. Boyer, France, 218; Hagen, Cyril Tolley and Fred [illegible] land, 219.

WOOD GETS 68

Wood [illegible] his [illegible] group [illegible] with [illegible] round of [illegible] 68 [illegible] efforts of Hagen and Jones in this championship and all but catch the record of 67 of William Patrick Nolan of Ireland. Wood thus came all the way from nine strokes back to [illegible] and [illegible] his great chance still before him in the final round this morning.

His wasn't the only sub-par [illegible] others [illegible] Diegel had fine 71s early this morning to push up from the rear and take the lead. Olin Dutra, another American, had a total of 222 as did Boyer, the Frenchman. Joe as total of 218, Sarazen, the champion, was out in 35 but faded on the back nine as they all did. He finally took a 78.

Dudley, only a stroke back this morning, also had a 35 in the turn, but took all coming home for a 76. Horton Smith, out in 34, was similarly back in 41 for a [illegible]

SHUTE VICTIM

But the real tragedy was reserved upon Shute, who hit the turn in a dazzling 33, to gain four strokes on Hagen and be only two back of the lead after [illegible] the full force of the wind caught up with him and he came home in 41 for a 73 and 219.

George Dunlap, American amateur, was even keeping his back nine, taking 42 for [illegible] a total of 228. Joe Ezar, Waco, Tex., finished with the same total after taking a 77.

Sarazen, the champion, who now had the only thing he asked—a fighting chance—[illegible] final round in the afternoon to make it good, hit [illegible] strokes on Cotton who needed a 38 to [illegible]

President Calls on Sailors to Develop Ring Champ

Philadelphia, July 7 (US)—President Roosevelt has decided that it is up to the navy to produce a new boxing king.

This was revealed by officers of the U. S. S. Indianapolis when it arrived here at the navy yard after carrying the President from Campobello, N. B., back to his duties in Washington.

There were bouts by the sailors in President Roosevelt's honor on board ship and the President made a short speech. Officers quoted him as saying:

"Since the defeat of Sailor Jack Sharkey by Primo Carnera, I think it is up to the navy to develop a new champion. We can't let the championship stay away from the United States, can we?"

WEETAMOE SETS YACHT PACE FROM CAPE

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

In a light southwest breeze over a calm sea the racing fleet of the Eastern Yacht Club got sail this morning bound for Gloucester from Provincetown on the second leg of the annual cruise.

The Q and eight meter boats were sent away first from the starting line off Wood End, followed by the schooners and the big racing sloops Vanitie and Weetamoe.

Gerard B. Lambert again placed Vanitie in the weather berth at the start, but as they approached Race Point light Vanderbilt appeared to be working Weetamoe out into the lead. All skippers set ballooners in the light air.

Two riggers from the Herreshoff yard in Bristol, R. I., worked all night replacing the jib topsail stay which forced Westamoe out of the race yesterday and she was again in fine racing shape. Crowds on the bathing beach watched the white-sailed fleet get under way.

Vanitie led the fleet into Provincetown last night by nearly an hour, but after handicaps were figured the little Q sloop Robin sailed by the Hovey boys, had made the best corrected time of the day.

Thanks largely to the efforts of Bert Metzger, hard-working chairman of the race committee, the Boston Yacht Club fleet will be the biggest in several years when it sets sail for the outward journey tomorrow afternoon from Marblehead.

Some 16 sailing craft and 10 power cruisers have signed up for the annual cruise, which will take the pleasure yachts nearly 200 miles along the Maine coast in the coming week. Three formal races are on the schedule and several private battles between rival skippers promise to make the trip interesting.

Tonight the captains meet at the club's Marblehead station for a chowder as guests of Commodore Edward G. Jay to discuss plans for the cruise. Tomorrow afternoon the fleet gets up anchor and heads for Gloucester, starting at 3 o'clock.

Dr. L. W. Lunt of Milton has provided his schooner Seaward as flagship for the cruise from which Commodore Jay and McInnis will direct the fleet.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Anybody who represents a $100,000 syndicate has a right to feel a bit important. Toots Mondt, for example. For even with the stock market going up and long shots winning at Rockingham Park, $100,000 is quite a lot of money.

This is the sum a Toronto syndicate [illegible] to [illegible] jumping Jo Savoldi's wrestling contract following the latter's victory over Jim London.

The Toronto syndicate asked Mondt [illegible] up into Boston to talk with Paul Bowser, who [illegible] Ed Don George signed to defend his world's heavyweight wrestling championship against Henri Deglane at Braves Field on July 18.

Mr. Boston

"Will you let Savoldi wrestle Nick Lutze in a finish bout on the George-DeGlane card?" Bowser had queried the Toronto syndicate.

Mondt was then told to hurry to Boston to see what all the shooting was about. . . .

Savoldi Unafraid

Savoldi, of course, is not excited over the thought of wrestling or supporting bout to George and DeGlane. He believes he can lick both of these men.

"Money talks," said Mondt. "The Toronto crowd is anxious to get its $100,000 back. Then it can go on to make some real money. I am willing to match Savoldi with Lutze provided we can get the proper terms."

"Why not?" demanded Toots. "Savoldi can beat Lutze. He was doing so in their last match which was ended by a 30-minute time limit. I would like to see Savoldi and Lutze shoot it out."

Mondt and Bowser will go into a huddle. If Bowser lands Savoldi, he will then go gunning for Lutze's signed contract. . . .

George Is Confident

Ed Don George is here to start training for his title defense match with DeGlane. He will train at Mansion Inn. He says he will win in two straight falls and prove he is a real champion.

DeGlane will train in public at Salisbury Beach. The Frenchman figures he is a cinch to regain his lost laurels. . . .

Random Shots at Target

Lou Smith, accompanied by the charming Mrs. Smith came down from Rockingham Park to see the Walker-Brouillard bout, Leslie Mack was in the party and whispered that the Argonne A. A. would be back on the firing [illegible] November . . . No talk of quitting the boxing game now . . . Maybe Mack has rushed in on a few winners at Rockingham.

Jimmy Johnston was also at the ringside . . . And tells me he intends to go through with the world's light heavyweight championship bout between Maxie Rosenbloom and Mickey Walker . . . Even though the Toy Bulldog got licked by Brouillard . . . Pete Reilly, former manager of Tom Delaney, also came down from Rockingham to see the scrap . . . And told everybody Jack Sharkey was beating Primo Carnera up to the sixth round.

Doc Kearns, with a mill on deck worth of poise was the chief scout in Walker's corner. . . Jack Dempsey admitted to me recently he was one of the greatest managers in the boxing game . . . I always thought Dempsey would have retained his title longer than he did if he hadn't broken with Kearns . . . The jam was caused when Kearns opposed Dempsey marrying Estelle Taylor, saying the marriage would end on the rocks . . . It did, and so did the Dempsey-Kearns partnership.

Dan Parker of the New York Mirror, and Harry Grayson of the World Telegram were in for the fight . . . Broadway is still interested in Walker . . . Morris Lemoine tells me he has signed Brouillard to battle Ben Jeby at the Yankee Stadium, in New York, for the world's middleweight championship on July 26 . . . I like Brouillard.

Brouillard Proves Toy Bulldog Is Washed Up

By JACK CONWAY

Mickey Walker, Toy Bulldog of other days is only a shadow of his former self. He proved an easy victim for one youthful Lou Brouillard in a 10-round bout before 15,000 fans at the Boston Garden. I gave Brouillard every round.

Walker weighed in at 170 pounds against 161 pounds for Brouillard. That was the [illegible] condition of the two men. Walker looked [illegible] and slow. He would have fought better if he had carried 20 pounds. A [illegible] difficult to choose [illegible] exception to the rule.

WALKER GIVES BEST

[illegible] assumed [illegible] fighting [illegible] everything. I believe some of our [illegible] writers are [illegible] they haven't had an idea for an interesting column [illegible] charged somebody with larceny. Threw enough mud and some of it stuck.

Bulldog has lost some of his fighting heart. The record books show that he should be in the arms and legs line, unable to carry on orders. That is the spell when a boxer is on the way out.

MICKEY'S STOMACH WEAK

Mickey was in there with an opportunity to [illegible] humiliate [illegible] Walker who licked [illegible] along [illegible] decisive [illegible] A few [illegible] with a sturdy scrapper like Brouillard who pattered [illegible] and [illegible] Walker [illegible] in every bit as much as the Walker who licked [illegible]

In the seventh round Brouillard [illegible] his left [illegible] deep in Walker's midsection. The padded mitt disappeared among the rolls of fat and caused Walker to stagger back. The stomach was Mickey's weak spot. He doesn't take them any too well downstairs any more. No body blow to be hit by the stomach, but this is particularly true when one has passed the age of 30 and has lived.

The show drew $21,000. The Baer-Schmeling and Sharkey-Carnera bouts stimulated new interest in boxing.

Vittorio Livan of Italy outpointed Dick Madden of Roxbury in the semifinal of eight rounds.

Werner Arcelli of Italy won over Lou Diller of Cleveland in one session bout in five heats. Tommy Ramone of Watertown received the duke over Joe Delmont of Roxbury at the end of six rounds.

FAST RACERS IN AMERICAN 'CAP'

BY SAM COHEN

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., July 7—Entries of 12 of the leading horses here were received in the nominations for the Boston Evening American, handicap tomorrow, feature race of the meeting here.

Place performers in past races here hook up in this event, which looms as a closup. The field so far has for nominations, Cattail and Puchero of the W. J. Ziegler stable; Sea Fox, son of Man O' War and Porters Dream of the C. F. Carreaud stable; Band Wagon, My Counsellor and Hope To Do, the three leading horses in the Admiral C. T. Grayson stables; J. Y. Martin's Dark Hope; Cantoria, Glenrothes, Fortune Youth and Octorora.

Practically all of these horses have been racing previous starts here and the best of the entry horses will be left to face the barrier tomorrow for the Boston Evening American purse.

Secretary Jim Munroe said today, however, that although the largest entry of the meeting and will stand out as one of the best drawing cards here, the $800 Raymond purse, a mile race for 4-year-olds and up. The race is the stand out of the program today.

Smith Huntington Pilot

Hunger and Hardship Primo's Lot on Road

CHAPTER TWO

By PRIMO CARNERA

Hearst Newspapers Boxing Champion

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I was born in the village of Sequals, Italy, about 60 miles northwest of the historic city of Venice, 27 years ago this coming October—on the 25 th of that month.

My father and mother—Rosa and Giovanna Carnera—had nine children, and in the box of [illegible] this writing, I am most happy to know, as are my brothers, Secondo and Severiano, who are twins. The latter has been in the United States for several years.

There were hardly more than 300 residents of Sequals at the time of my birth there in 1906, and not many more than that today. But of all the places I have visited I think most fondly of my little native village, the folks there, and the neighbors who, I am sure, think more of me than all the rest of the world combined.

HOME, DEAR TO PRIMO

Every chance I have I return to Sequals, where, I am sorry today, I was not of much promise as a boy. I was unusually big and very young and preferred all play and no work. School had little attraction for me and Sunday school even less. I always wanted to travel places.

When I was about eight years old, the World War broke out. That did not mean so much to Sequals at first, but soon after Italy joined the Allies the pinch of war began to be felt. Young men of the village joined the Italian army, goods were requisitioned right and left, and mosaic work came to a standstill.

Relatively more than right, I was apprenticed to a cabinet maker. That was about 1915 and for near four years I bended clothes, planed planks and stirred glue, well as I should, the trade of a woodworker.

Many will say I was lucky at that for had I been but a few years older the future Attilio Apt might have been burned among the [illegible] of that name. Though I did not reach my teens until after the armistice, I could do an average laborer's work long before then.

While I was strong enough to do a man's work and fairly skilled for an apprentice at both cabinet and [illegible] work, I wanted to and mosaic work, I wanted to eat as a trades apprentice in Italy. Such wages were never high but the war had driven them down to all but nothing. My rapidly growing body demanded more food than my salary of $4 a week could buy. So I stamped off to [illegible] in 1919.

From town to town I wandered for about four years at hard labor most of the time. Yet I could scarcely earn enough (never more than a dollar a day) to buy sufficient food.

Only necessity put a curb on my appetite and perhaps that was well for when I could afford it, I did eat too much and I put on fat quickly.

Strange as I may appear to the sporting public now, I was weird indeed in my youthful days. I dressed as a peasant—a self-tailored smock, a pick-up felt hat and cold [illegible]

REACHED FULL SIZE

I reached my height of 6-foot-8 in those years and—in spite of hunger—it forced my weight to about 285 pound

Surely I must have been both a fierce yet funny sight the day I [illegible] up to the barker of a small circus that playing just outside Toulouse

There was a professional strong man with this circus who posed on a platform and did [illegible] lifting to help draw patrons. The barker, noticing my size, invited me to try the weights. They were just too light. The barker invited me to [illegible] the show—and that marked my debut in the world of sports.

OLD RUTH STILL LAYS HIS BUNTS IN THE BLEACHERS

You are old, Father Ruth—but you can still paste 'em a mile when it counts! Behold baseball's king of kings, lumbering across the plate to the roar of worshipping thousands after pasting out the homer in the third round, which won the baseball Battle of the Century for the American League over the National League at Comiskey Park, Chicago. The Babe Ruth Special tallied two runs and drove Hallahan to seek solace in the showers. Fifty thousand looked on.

Reilly, Spellman on Revere Mat Card

Alex MacLean, promoter of wrestling at the Rollaway Rink at Revere Beach, has signed up four performers for the main bout and semifinal of next Tuesday night's show.

The main bout will bring together Marino Kinkelaar and Fred Carome of Lynn. In the semi-final Pat Reilly faces John Spellman.

Return Go Sought for Secret, Strack

A return bout between Charlie Strack and the Black Secret is likely to be clinched today by Wrestling Promoter Steve McPherson for his Arena wrestling show next Wednesday night.

The Secret has agreed to wrestle Strack on a 75-25 basis. He's to get the big end, win, lose or draw.

Harvard, Uclans, Husky Crews Race

Long Beach, Cal., July 7 (US)—Slender boats today were set to skim the waters of Marine Stadium in the preliminaries of the intercollegiate rowing regatta.

The first of two heats find Yale, greatest sprint crew of the East, pitted against the University of California at Berkeley, and Cornell, Washington rows the University of California at Los Angeles, and Harvard.

Larrivee Defeats Horn in 10 Rounds

North Adams, July 7—Leo Larrivee, Waterbury, Conn., won a decision over Teader Horn, in the main bout of ten rounds at the Meadowbrook Arena here. Larrivee forced the battle throughout but he was dropped for a count of nine in the third round.

GOLF CLASSIC ON MONDAY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

One bag with 12 clubs, nine irons and three woods, will be awarded to the winner of the 1933 hole-in-one contest under the auspices of the Boston Evening American which will get under way Monday at Franklin Park.

All in all there will be 11 prizes, six for men three for women, a team trophy and a trophy to be given to the retail stores team with the best score.

2—Bag of 10 clubs, seven irons, three woods.
2—Wrist Watch, Sports Model.
4—Sports Suit.

1—Zipper Bag.
2—Golf or Sport Shoes.
3—One Dozen Golf Balls.

All the prizes will be the best money can buy. And they are up for you to take them. Anyone, dub or expert, can make a hole-in-one.

And, possibly, when the firing at Franklin Park ceases and the awards are made some of the most valuable prizes are apt to be carried off by golfers who couldn't get under 150, not counting the ones they kick.

On Monday, at 9 a. m., the contest will start at the hole-in-one layout in Franklin Park. Each contestant will be allowed five shots at the tee, no more. He must even use his own clubs and golf balls, as none will be supplied.

Any one, man or woman, can enter the tournament. The only requirement is that the entrant be over 18 years of age. An entry blank will be found on this page. It's not too late. Send it in to the Golf Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. And get in this finest of all tournaments.

American Leaguers the Stronger, Test Proves

By JOE CASHMAN

The American League beats the National League, 4 to 2, in the World's Fair all-star battle at Chicago.

What, if anything, does that prove?

American Leaguers naturally will claim it shows their loop to be the stronger. But one game could hardly do that. Connie Mack's aggregation merely happened to have the better pitching between the hours of 2 and 4 yesterday afternoon. The National Leaguers might win were the two outfits to clash again this p. m.

The "battle of the century," however, did furnish the answer to a few questions that have been the cause of countless heated diamond arguments.

FRAY SETTLES DEBATE

1—That the ball in one league is no faster than the pellet in the other loop.

2—That pitching still represents at least 75 per cent of the strength of any ball club.

5—That the all-star tilt—the first ever sanctioned by the two leagues—met with the unanimous approval of American fandom and will probably be made an annual event.

The two leagues began slowing up the ball at the start of the '31 season by raising the seams and thickening the cover. Since then the averages of the leading hitters and the totals of the home run leaders in the National League have been considerably lower than those of the pace-setting sluggers in the American League.

N. L. APPLE LIVELY

The happenings at Chicago do not bear out that contention. The American League ball was used for the first 4½ innings and the National League apple the rest of the way. Frisch hit a home run, Warneke rapped out a triple, and Pie Traynor came through with a double, the National League's only extra-base blows, while the supposedly slower ball of the senior loop was in use.

The heaviest hitters in the pastime were in there swinging, and they batted for just .262. The American Leaguers made nine hits for a team mark of .290, while their opponents connected for eight safeties and an average of .235.

Though they were playing together for the first time, the National Leaguers played errorless ball and the American Leaguers made but one excusable miscue. They couldn't have clicked any better had they been working together for years.

RUTH STEALS SHOW

Ruth, as usual, stole the show. He fanned twice while the crowd roared but the runs needed by his mates to win he produced with his home run. One drive which he should have held to a single, he let roll for a triple, but later he backed up against the wall to make a game-saving catch. The Bambino is slowing up, but in the tight spots when the pressure is heaviest, he's still all the great players of all time rolled into one.

BROWNS VISIT FIGHTING SOX

The Red Sox arrived home this morning from Reading, Pa., where they showed Bob Quinn's New York-Penn Leaguers how the pastime should be played, while the eyes of the baseball world were on the "battle of the century" in Chicago.

Marty McManus' hustling hands bring baseball back to Boston after a three-day absence, on the morrow, when they open a series with the Browns. After the basement boys from the Mound City, the Fenway flock tackles the Tigers, Indians, White Sox, Yankees and A's.

If the Sox can do as well at home as they did on their recent road trip, they should be at the top of the second division, if not among the first, when they start West again.

Neither "Bucky" Walters from the Missions nor Fred Muller from Seattle has yet shown up at the Fens, but both young infielders from the Coast are expected to arrive in time to be in uniform for tomorrow's game.

Pay Cut Discussed by Soccer Solons

Soccer legislators of the North Mass. and N. H. Association meet tomorrow night at the American House to iron out a few problems, the most important of which will be decideding on the salary referees will receive.

The United States Soccer Association at its annual meeting last month decided to reduce the arbitrs' fees in the national cup competition.

The taxing of every player registered by the State Association is another matter which the delegates will have to act.

The Witness

THE COURT was filled. The case wasn't important, but it was raining outside. Peeping above the rows of benches were rows of heads bobbing like yacht buoys in a heavy swell.

The judge had just entered. A court attache had yelled something unintelligible and everyone had stood up noisily. The judge scowled at the taxpayers, and sat down with a grunt. He ruffled some papers. Then he folded his hands across his bulging black robe and leaned back to be bored in comfort.

"Your honor," said the defense attorney, "I move that the case be dismissed on the ground that the evidence fails"

"Motion denied." The judge admired himself for swiftness of decision. He knew what the attorneys were going to say before they said it. But he had nothing on them. They knew what he was going to reply before he knew what they were going to say. Or am I too fast? . . .

The case concerned an accident. The defendant had been driving his car along Main Street and Jones Place? Tell the court why, please.'

"Waiting for a street car. Why, may I ask?"

"I was going to see my son. He's sick, and—and his wife left him. He's now on my way to take care of him."

"Oh, oh, I see. Well, that's very noble of you, Mrs. Hale. Very noble, I'm sure. But that has nothing to do with the case. You say that Mr. Wigglebotham's car was moving at a fast rate. About how fast, would you say?"

"Well, maybe 40. Maybe a little more."

"Forty miles per hour? What qualifies you to say that, Mrs. Hale? How can you judge the speed of a car so well?"

"I ought to," said Mrs. Hale, "when one of the Yellow Cab drivers licensed in this state back in the days when my husband and I had garages."

"That's all. You may step down, Mrs. Hale."

Quietly, the old lady left the stand. Wigglebotham bit his nails furiously as he watched her. To her, he knew, would go the credit for winning the case for Ruffo. Without her, it would have been one man's word against another.

The rest of the afternoon was stuffed with dull procedure. There were motions, pleas, denials, arguments, writs, precedents, and gavel pounding. Before the little hand on the court clock pointed to five, Pasquale Ruffo had been awarded a tidy sum of money by the court, and Bertram Wigglebotham would have to pay it.

The crowd filed out slowly. The attorneys left. The judge stretched and shook hands all around. Wigglebotham bit the last piece of his remaining fingernail and left. Pasquale Ruffo beamed at the world and walked out with his attorney, who also beamed.

"Mrs. Hale," he said, "I want to thank you in behalf of my client for what you did this afternoon. It was fine of you to step forward in the interests of justice like that. There are still more men sacrificing citizens of your calibre this would be a far better country than it is.

"Now, Mrs. Hale, I don't want you to be insulted if I offer you quite a little present. I know it's unethical, but your time and trouble are worth consideration of some sort. Here. Please take this $50 as a token from Mr. Ruffo and me."

The old lady's pale blue eyes looked at the money dully. Her hand shook as her fingers closed over the bills. The words came from her lips. Slow, carefully chosen, deliberate words.

"Mister," she said, "I'm homeless!" she muttered. "Fifty lousy bucks! You'll make it a hundred, you bum, or I'll go back there and tell the truth."

7 STAR NYMPHS IN BIG SWIM

Seven of the girls who turned in outstanding performances in the Boston Swimming Association meet at Nautical Pool, Revere, Tuesday, are entered in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser annual swimming races at Columbus Park Beach, South Boston, Saturday afternoon, July 29.

One girl is Miss Alice Bridges, 16, of Whitinsville, who set up a record of 1 minute 6 2-5 seconds in the 100-meter free-style event Tuesday. She hopes to repeat at the American-Advertiser splash.

Another is Eileen McCarthy, 12, of Dedham, member of the Boston Swimming Association, who established a record Tuesday of 3 minutes 12 5-5 seconds in the New England 220-yard junior free style championship event. Miss Evelyn Klein of Olneyville, R. I., and Miss Frances Ivas, 16, of South Boston, who finished second and third, respectively, in this event, are also entered.

Miss Margaret Lynch, 18, of Charlestown, another member of B. S. A., won the 100-yard breaststroke, and Miss Elna Blumquist of Providence, who finished third in Tuesday's meet, are others scheduled to participate in the big races. Miss Mildred McGlynn of Andover, Me., is another who landed second prize at Revere Tuesday in the 50-meter free-style event, will also appear.

Planning Board Stays

The Senate refused, by a vote of 25 to 9, to abolish the division of metropolitan planning as recommended last summer.

U. S. FIXES NEW CRIME LIST

Washington, July 7 (INS)—Millions of identification records in the U. S. Bureau of Investigation were being examined today by Department of Justice experts in Atty.-Gen. Cummings' campaign against racketeers and gangsters.

Justice Department experts planned to segregate the kidnapers, murderers, gangsters, racketeers, robbers, train robbers and other criminals whose records are in the bureau at Washington. It was believed most of the known crooks of the country have been arrested in the central finger print system.

The bureau of identification has been instructed by Cummings to give every possible co-operation to the states and cities.

Cummings urged all police departments, sheriffs and other peace officers to forward to Washington records of the fingerprints and other identification records of any persons picked up for crime or those apprehended on suspicion.

HARSH WORDS, MARSHAL!

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

There has been a lawless disposition to tear awnings and deface signs in the business district about town. Most of it is done at night, when the guilty ones think they are secure from observation. I would warn them that even so, they had best desist. It will not always turn out so well for the offenders, who, if they are wise, will stop it now.—W. P. Shepherd, City Marsal.

OUR DAILY PUZZLE.

(Testimony before House Committee). "Liberalization of the Eighteenth Amendment to permit 11 or 12 per cent wine would bring in $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year in new revenue. But I am not absolutely convinced that repeal will materially increase our revenue."—A. V. Dalrymple, head of Federal prohibition forces.

Maybe he started out thinking about the Federal Government and ended by remembering the Federal prohibition forces.

THE SAGA OF SWEENEY'S GULCH
Fun on the Frontier
By Aunt Bella.

Note—If you've read Aunt Bella's narrative thus far you know how Mazie took the stand and told why she killed Mike Gumboil. Now go on with the trial:

"She killed him 'cause she loved him," was the judge's wise decree,
As he blew, clean off, the seidel's froth, right on the good Juree;
"She killed him 'cause she loved him, boys, what will your verdict be?"
"She killed him 'cause she loved him? Sure, let's let her off scot-free!"
"That's all there is," sig grandpa said, "So off you go to bed;
But I must add that Mazie had now painted Guichtown red,
And that same night, while in a fight, had shot ten hombres dead;
But lost her life beneath a knife, and slow to death she bled!"
(The End. Hooray!)

Queen Elizabeth and Pearls

Fashions Change, Women Do Not

PORTRAIT OF QUEEN ELIZABETH, PAINTED FROM LIFE

This picture, now in England's National Portrait Gallery, shows Elizabeth, England's powerful Queen, at about the time she decided that the best thing to do with Queen Mary of Scotland was to chop off her head.

Nobody knows who painted this picture, done evidently from life. Various things in the portrait interest you. First of all, the Queen intelligently displays her forehead, she doesn't cover it up with little curls.

She knew that her principal asset was her brain, and allowed everybody to see the "ivory temple" that contained it.

Interesting also is the number of pearls, GENUINE you may be sure, for there hadn't yet been invented the modern perfected artificial kind.

If you should count these pearls, observe the size, and ask a jeweler what they would be worth today, you would be surprised at the result.

The modern woman even if her husband could afford it, would not want as many pearls. A few of them "very big" would answer the purpose.

The Queen's violently red hair, of which she was proud, which other ladies at the court imitated with dyes, was accompanied in her case, by the ardent temperament, commonly supposed to go with red hair.

She liked numerous gentlemen, didn't hesitate to let them know it, didn't hesitate to chop their heads off when they showed a lack of appreciation, did not marry any one of them. Liked to be called "The Virgin Queen."

You pity the gentlemen that had their heads chopped off, but you can't help realizing that in modern times, the much pitied Essex might be described by a very unpleasant name.

Extension of Mill Hours

Proposed Change in Laws an Experiment

The textile manufacturers of Massachusetts and the American Federation of Labor have apparently reached an agreement to suspend the 6 o'clock closing law and to permit the women to work until 10 o'clock at night in the mills.

The 6 o'clock law was put onto the statute books by the thoughtful and considerate people of this State who were determined that our women should not be compelled to work long hours.

They had another social thought of good morals in mind, too. They felt that the women should be at home in the comfort of their families and supervising the behavior of their children during the hours of evening and night.

Obviously we are now in a serious economic emergency which holds some substantial reasons for a temporary change.

The national government has at last fixed a minimum wage for these women workers. Also it has limited the hours of labor, so that the standards will be universal throughout the country. They are to have the forty-hour week. In order that two shifts may work and that the largest number of operatives possible may be employed, it does seem necessary that the legal day be extended to 10 o'clock at night. Otherwise the Massachusetts mills would employ only half the number of operatives possible, and they would suffer the competition of mills in other States which will conform to the new national standards.

Our textile industry is again on its feet. The machines are spinning to a lively tune. Many thousands of operatives have been called back to work. This improvement is traceable in part to the generally improved business conditions and it is traceable in part to the fact that the competing States of the South have been compelled to elevate the conditions of their workers.

Evidently we are to try out the changes in the Massachusetts laws which were accomplished by a generation of struggle by the workers and their friends. Let us do it with the understanding that the changes are an experiment and that they will be abolished unless they actually provide advantages for the women in the mills who have never been overly paid for their arduous and exacting labors.

New York Day by Day

One Thing and Another

NEW YORK, July 7—Thoughts while strolling: Those trained dogs for blind men—one step, stop and look around! Hope Williams and Mrs. Ryley Cooper look alike. And Watterson Rothacker and Dick Greiner bear a resemblance. What bright, ungrateful eyes pigeons have. One of my favorite people—Irene Castle.

O. O. McIntyre

Some day I'm going to act suspicious around those private guards in front of the Rockefellers' homes. Just to see what happens. What became of Harry Carroll? Wasn't it terrible—the way they punished the gold hoarders! Ho hum! Nobody can look so baby-talkish as Helen Kane.

One word description of Isabelle Leighton—chirpy. Corey Ford is writing the best burlesque these days. Howard Scott and James Cagney have the same shade of hair. I can never think whether it's Gerald or Gerard Swope. Overheard: "I think I'll go over on Broadway and barter myself for a while."

Joseph Cummings Chase, a Kents Hill, Me., boy, who made good in the city. Nobody can muss up their eyebrows like John N. Garner. Unless it's Messmore Kendall. Clemence Dane could pass for Elsie Janis. It wouldn't hurt Stanley Rinehart to hippetyhop to the barbs. shop.

Nobody has a better detective story writing name than Samuel Dashiell Hammett. Sounds like the villain's hiss. Broadway gaggers are walking into Lindy's wearing false mustaches a la Hitler. They say Ernest Hemingway cusses as poetically as Mark Twain. I don't believe it.

When in the neighborhood I drop into my father's favorite hotel, The Woodstock. He stopped there in the picturesque period when it was The Spaulding. Today, a bit outmoded by the newer flamboyant shrines all about, yet something of the old atmosphere remains. Years ago its dining rooms jumped into favor when Morgan's chef of his Corsair grew too portly for the galley and took a post there. Stanford White was a customer. So was Charles Frohman.

* * *

In the days of The Spaulding, the management had to request Henry Miller to give up his lodging there. Not for moral turpitude but because the actor, coming in after the play, awakened guests when he used the telephone. A vital person, Mr. Miller thundered over the phone even in casual conversation. He could never subdue his voice. He left with mutual regrets.

Rockwell Kent, who rocks the artistic world with his wood cuts, hibernating his annual period in the '40's, likes to appear outdoorsey and pops in at teas exploiting the highest little finger lifts, in corduroys and lumberjack shirts. He is a reputed vegetarian, too.

* * *

A character around old Murray's Roman Gardens—remember the revolving dance floor?—was introduced to strangers on the loose as Prince Powdosky, formerly of the Russian Imperial Guards. In his seesaw accents he had astonishing way of misinterpreting the most casual remarks, taking violent offense and winding up with invitation to pistols for two at dawn.

* * *

The actor, John Mason, introduced him to me one after theater in the bar. Just to make talk I remarked the Prince's profile was somewhat like John Drew's. His face twisted into a fierce scowl. Bewildered, I tried to explain Drew was a famous actor of the day. This seemed to make matters worse. The Prince beat his chest, tore his hair and let go a barrage of Russian epithets. I appealed to Mason, who questioned him in made-up gibberish and said: "He thinks you insulted his sister." It raged hellsbells for a half hour and went home and tossed all night trying to think up some way to duck his duel challenge. Not until I was renewing passports did I know it was a gag.

Just Folks

"Move We Adjourn"

When I'm weary of argument wordy
And tired of continuous debate,
When the speaker like some hurdy-gurdy,
Which carries on early and late,
Keeps up a monotonous bellow
On lessons I don't want to learn,
'Tis then I give cheers for the fellow
Who rises and moves to adjourn.

There are motions to lay on the table,
There are motions for this and for that,
And I stick just as long as I'm able
And hark to the chatterer's chat,
I stand for the rising thanks motion
For the one who has done a good turn,
But my friend is the chap with the notion
To get up and move to adjourn.

There are some who like papers and speeches
And open discussions of things;
The heights some new orator reaches;
The lesson and message he brings.
But each his own fancy must cling to.
What one chooses others may spurn.
So this simple tribute I sing to
The brother who moves to adjourn!

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

The Truth About Youth?

WHAT'S YOUR opinion of Modern Youth?

Is the widespread report of their worthlessness a Dirty Libel?

Are they, in short, the Hope of the World—the one chance we have of vigorous rebirth?

Elsie Robinson

Here's a gentleman who says they ARE. No, he's not an elderly Victorian longing for the dear, dull days of '73. Nor is he a Modern Moralist, frowning heavily on post-war frivolity.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am much interested in these attacks on and defenses of Modern Youth. They are mostly being made by middle-aged people who either think we are the worst-treated or the worst-acting generation that ever happened. Maybe you would like to hear what one of us thinks about ourselves.

On the surface we may seem reckless but the truth is, most of us are tired of life before we even start. There isn't enough real rebellion in us to warm an egg. There are more old fogies of 23 in this country than of any other age!

Youth doesn't need anyone to take up its defense. Youth needs a good swift kick, literally or figuratively, at once, to put it into action. And if people don't stop sympathizing with Youth, and babying it, and shouting in its defense, Youth is going to pine away and die completely.

These poor, unfortunate, downtrodden Youth of America! Everyone thinks they're held back by the sluggishness, selfishness and laziness of middle-age; but I think we're held back by something cowardly and lazy and soft in ourselves.

If the fathers of this year's graduating classes were one-third as lazy-minded and timid as their sons and daughters, the country would indeed be at a stand-still.

Those fathers, most of them, came to this country as youthful immigrants—took their chances—made their mistakes—earned their laurels. Now they are pampering our "Glorious Youth"—AND HOW OUR GLORIOUS YOUTH CAN TAKE IT!

Look at us. What are most of us doing? As I said before—just waiting. Sunk in apathy, waiting "for something to turn up." Yes, the Old Folks who pamper us are to blame; but if we're half as smart and brave as we say we are, why do we let them do it?

We let them do it because we love it! We wouldn't be untied from the apron-strings for anything.

The day is gone when a man of 21 (for they WERE men, then) married his sweetheart and took her in a covered wagon off into the sunset, happy, stout-hearted, self-sufficient. Nowadays, most men of 21 are college boys, frolicking home like overgrown pups at holidays, gladdening the eyes of too-fond parents, using ingenuity and tact to get a bigger allowance. Or else they are errand boys in some business, rushing away at five sharp to tell their families or their best girls how tired they have to work, how tired they are and what a terrible grind it all is, anyway.

They work a lot, though. They wish they could get Saturday morning off, or they wish the boss would be away tomorrow, so they could get a little rest. They wish THEIR firm would observe holidays the way some places do.

They're bored, most of them. Bored with work. They're lazy-minded, sluggish, selfish. They have no imagination. They're dull, middle-aged fogies—and they are getting altogether too much pity.

"TWENTY-THREE."

There's what one young man thinks of his generation. Do YOU agree?

Human Side of the News

King Zog, Dandy Ruler of Albania, Must Look Elsewhere Than Italy Now for Gold

By Edwin C. Hill

Swanky little King Zog of Albania seems to have broken loose from the iron clutches of Mussolini. The news is that Albania has dismissed its Italian military adviser, General Pariani. More significant news is that Italy has declined to lend any more money to buy American-made 16-cylinder cars and gold-laced white uniforms for his little Majesty.

The intricacies of politics in the Balkans are usually incomprehensible to the western mind, and the latest move of Mussolini in letting go his tailhold on Albania and the eastern coast of the Adriatic below Fiume is a first-class puzzle, even in Italian jig-saw enigmas. Apparently, Il Duce was determined to absorb wild, mountainous little Albania into the new Roman Empire which is being created by the Fascisti. The Albanian army was being reconstructed and rearmed by Italy. Italian money was being poured into the Albanian treasury, and King Zog was not even required to pay interest. Suddenly, all this comes to an end, apparently because France and Jugo-Slavia frowned earnestly in Mussolini's direction.

Ahmed Bey Zogu, the 38-year-old monarch who lifted himself to a throne by his boot straps, who is the Beau Brummell of royalty, and whose handsome face would screen well in Hollywood, is, seemingly, footloose and free, although one never knows what Il Duce is really up to. King Zog, one-time farm boy and tribal chief of the mountains, has been on the spot ever since he fought and schemed his way to the presidency and then to the throne. Only good luck and a bodyguard of Russian mercenaries have delayed his enrollment among the better known Rumanian angels.

This turbulent kingdom of Albania is the sore spot of the Balkans, among whose forests and mountains gather the clouds of European wars. The Treaty of Versailles liberated the country, which lies along the east coast of the Adriatic, comes from the heel of Italy's boot. Immediately it became a bone of contention between Jugo-Slavia and Italy, with France as the ally of the Slavs.

In 1924 the sturdy priest, Bishop Fan Noli, educated at Harvard, led the liberals against the feudal tribesmen of the mountains and drove them out of power. The sleek and slender Ahmed Bey Zogu retreated to Belgrade. Six months later, he crossed the border with a force of Russian refugees, his own wild tribesmen, Serbian artillery and Italian machine guns. The big guns, as Napoleon always said, carried the election. The Albanians, heroic fighters in man-to-man combat, couldn't stand against the cannon.

From the presidency, Zogu the First proclaimed himself King of Albania. His coronation array consisted of a white tunic heavily brocaded in gold, tight-fitting breeches of pink velvet, a broad mantle of scarlet, fur-trimmed, and the finest of kid boots straight from Paris. In the months that followed King Zogu's machine guns mowed down all resistance.

His was Mussolini's man for years, this gentleman of 2000 costumes; golden spurs and the fierce loyalty of his mountaineer-tribesmen. "My dear and greatest friend" is the salutation he gave to Mussolini. And well he might. Italy lent him twenty million dollars a year ago. "Lent" is hardly the word. It was more of a gift, and a royal one for those days. But Albania, under King Zog, has been practically a dependency of the Kingdom of Italy.

King Zog turned the sleepy town of Tirana, with its five thousand Mohammedans, into a cosmopolitan capital, with 27 embassies and a jazz band. He poises gaily on the very brink of a volcano, but he does it with engaging dash. His principal worry is his throat, for he smokes a hundred cigarettes a day. But he dances along, while the sword of Damocles hangs above his handsome head.

Some day it may fall, for Albania is like Corsica, a land of vendettas and bloody feuds. Fathers, sons, wives and mothers of the dead, in battle and at the executioner's hand, have bitter scores to settle. These people know only one law—and eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth; a life for a life. They were a dangerous aggregation to handle even for the great Italian Dictator, who likes nothing better than to tame wild men. But France and the two Slav nations rattled the sabre and Il Duce, who seem bound to keep the peace at almost any provocation, has decided, apparently, to postpone the annexation of Albania until a more propitious moment.

Whatever his dreams may be—and he has hinted in some of his orations—he must address himself to the cheering Black Shirts that the Mediterranean must once more be an Italian lake—Italy is not ready for war, caught as she is, without allies, between the giant militatones of Soviet armed France and the jealous watchful Slavs.

Savings Banks Deposits

Should They Be Guaranteed?

The question was ably discussed by President Myron F. Converse of the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts.

In that history of more than a century not more than two or three closed their doors without paying 100 cents on the dollar.

We know a good deal about ourselves in savings banking. We know much more about local conditions than Kansas wheat, Southern cotton or Oregon lumber.

We, therefore, might hesitate about going into a central, national plan to liquidate the loans on mid-Western or Pacific Coast commodities when the record of the last 117 years and our knowledge of our own conditions would cause us not to hesitate one moment to guarantee the deposits and investments with which we are locally familiar.

Mr. Converse says that only last year, during the banking stringency, there was organized by law in this State the Mutual Savings Central Fund, Inc. The purpose of this movement was for the Bay State savings banks to pool their resources in order to strengthen any savings bank which found itself in straitened circumstances because of the unusual times.

Why not broaden this Central Fund? Why not make it a permanent institution, through which all the savings banks for all times could utter a formal guarantee of deposits to all depositors in this Commonwealth?

We can say with safety that the experience of the past century is an excellent guarantee to 2,700,000 persons who now have money on deposit in our savings banks. But this is the day of co-operation, it is the era of the new deal, and the banks might well adopt any policy which could increase the faith of the depositors and strengthen their security and contentment.

By all means, let it be tried.

We want industry and thrift among our people. Nor should any step be overlooked which can give them the safest foundation and encouragement for their industry and thrift.

Dr. Katherine Woo Honored

Boston honored herself by honoring Dr. Katherine Woo, the first Chinese woman to be given an honorary degree by an American college.

This good woman has been appropriately called the Florence Nightingale of China. She and her mother organized relief from the famines there. She nursed the ill and fed the undernourished. She erected hospitals and schools, where foreigners as well as Chinese may receive medical treatment and education.

In our smugness we are prone to overlook the achievements of the Oriental Nations. India and China gave us our fundamental mathematics and basic medicine and surgery. They had public education before Columbus found America. If they have become illiterate and poverty-stricken, it is because they allowed their military defenses to lag and themselves to be conquered by alien enemies. We can profit from their experiences in these matters, too.
